Jury Statements

The process of selection for the New Glass Review is surprisingly consistent. In spite of the diversity of submissions and the variety of jurors with whom we have shared this fascinating task, the annual two-day session goes off pretty much the same. Although viewpoints may differ sharply, we tend to agree on the majority of choices even in one another's areas of preference and specialty; the final hour always finds us adversaries, arguing about those few pieces that have the support of only one juror. Reducing the total to 100 is the worst part; each of us must give up pieces we believe should be included.

The process is positive, not negative. We select, not reject. But for each artist who makes it into the Review, seven do not. What of them? A large portion are newcomers who have never submitted before. (Sixteen of them are included here.) Many of these artists are not chosen because their work appears less well made and seems to be derived from the work of others. There is an unmistakable aura of imitation or emulation about much that is not selected. It is as if these artists, seeing the success of others, were determined to cash in on the same game. Or it may be the only game they know because it is all that their particular teacher was able to impart. Another's skin never fits. The fact that each of us is unique should insure the uniqueness of our work. The job is to find the approach that plays to our strengths, not to someone else's.

It takes time to do something well, although the art of our time is certainly most forgiving when it comes to technical incompetence. Much new work in glass (which does require craftsmanship) simply betrays a lack of skill. Where it does not, as in the arrangement of commercially produced units or stacked sheet glass, it usually betrays a lack of sophistication. Curiously, it is this skill factor that determined our choices among several well-established artists who have been in the Review before. After demonstrating considerable skill in glass making and design, they have taken up figurative subject matter – people, animals, or plants – but some just do not do this well. A decade ago, it was enough to hint at the human element, as in the face of a snowman or the compact body of a totem. Now it is not enough. The reverence for nature that motivated much of the art before this century is returning, but we have not been trained to communicate it. Very few glass artists draw or sculpt well in a traditional sense, and that is becoming increasingly evident.

The most controversial area in our selection process is still the matter of newness. Major figures are passed by year after year because no juror sees anything significantly new in their work. On the other hand, some are in year after year because one or more jurors note subtle changes and believe they are witnessing – and choosing – the evolution of an artist's creativity. Like time-lapse photography, they see the Review recording the development, stage by stage, of major talents. (Anyone who has raised a child knows that perpetual newness can go hand in hand with consistent growth.) Documenting the evolution of individual artists may prove to be one of this publication's major contributions to the history of glass as an art form.

And many works – perhaps most – are excluded merely because they are tasteless. It is not that they violate any canons of so-called good taste; it is because they evidence no taste or feeling or judgment in the relationship of the parts, no sense of proportion or of texture or color or form. It is hard to put words around these issues. When such work is projected on the screens in front of the jurors, nobody says anything, and the work simply goes by.

Der Auswahlprozeß für die New Glass Review ist überraschend kontinuierlich. Trotz der Verschiedenartigkeit der Eingänge und der Vielzahl der Juroren, mit denen wir uns bisher diese faszinierende Aufgabe geteilt haben, verlaufen die alljährlichen zweitägigen Sitzungen stets ähnlich. Auch wenn die Standpunkte möglicherweise sehr auseinandergehen, stimmen wir gewöhnlich hinsichtlich der Mehrzahl der Objekte überein – eingeschlossen die unterschiedlichen Vorlieben und Fachgebiete der anderen. In der letzten Stunde sind wir immer Kontrahenten, die über jene wenigen Stücke diskutieren, die von nur einem Juror favorisiert werden. Die Anzahl auf nur 100 zu reduzieren, ist am schlimmsten: Jeder von uns muß dabei auf Stücke verzichten, von denen er glaubt, sie müßten unbedingt dabei sein.

Dieser Prozeß ist ein positiver, kein negativer. Wir wählen aus, aber wir weisen nicht zurück. Allerdings stehen für jeden Künstler, der in die Review aufgenommen wird, sieben, die es nicht schaffen. Aus welchen Gründen? Ein großer Teil sind Neulinge, die noch nie vorher teilgenommen haben. (Dieses Mal sind sechzehn dabei.) Viele dieser Künstler werden nicht berücksichtigt, weil ihre Arbeiten weniger gut ausgeführt sind und sich stark an die anderer anlehnen. Vieles von dem, was nicht ausgewählt wird, trägt eindeutig Züge von Imitation und Nacheiferung. Es scheint, als hätten sich diese Künstler angesichts des Erfolgs von anderen dazu entschlossen, mit einem Nachahmungsspiel abzukassieren. Oder es ist das einzige Spiel, das sie beherrschen, weil ihr Lehrer Ihnen nichts anderes beigebracht hat. Aber die Haut eines anderen paßt einem selten. Die Tatsache, daß jeder von uns einzigartig ist, sollte sich auch in der Einzigartigkeit unserer Arbeit widerspiegeln. Die Aufgabe dabei ist es, einen Ansatz zu finden, in dem unsere Stärken eine Rolle spielen und nicht die von irgendjemand.

Um etwas wirklich gut zu tun, braucht es seine Zeit, obwohl die Kunst unserer Tage in bezug auf technische Inkompétence sicherlich sehr nachsichtig ist. Viele neuere Arbeiten in Glas (das handwerkliches Können erfordert) lassen einfach einen Mangel an Fertigkeiten erkennen. Wo das nicht der Fall ist, wie beim Arrangement kommerziell produzierter Teile oder geschichteten Glasscheiben, kommt gewöhnlich ein Mangel an „Sophistication“ zum Ausdruck. Merkwürdigerweise hat dieser Faktor des künstlerischen Geschicks unser Urteil in bezug auf mehrere etablierte Künstler beeinflußt, die früher einmal in die Review aufgenommen worden sind. Nachdem sie ein beträchtliches Geschick bei Entwurf und Herstellung ihrer Objekte unter Beweis gestellt hatten, haben sie sich nun auf figurative Themen verlegt – Menschen, Tiere oder Pflanzen –, aber einige von ihnen machen das einfach nicht gut. Vor einem Jahrzehnt genügte es, das menschliche Element, etwa im Gesicht eines Schneemanns oder in der kompakten Gestalt eines Totems, anzudeuten. Heute ist das nicht mehr ausreichend. Der Respekt vor der Natur, der die Kunst vor unserem Jahrhundert weitgehend motivierte, kehrt zurück, aber wir sind nicht geschult, ihn auszudrücken. Nur sehr wenige Glaskünstler sind gute Zeichner oder Bildhauer im traditionellen Sinne, und das wird in verstärktem Maß deutlich.

Der kontroverseste Bereich bei unserem Auswahlprozeß ist nach wie vor der Punkt des Neuen. Große Namen bleiben Jahr für Jahr unberücksichtigt, weil kein Jurymitglied in ihren Arbeiten etwas signifikant Neues entdecken kann. Andererseits sind einige Künstler jedes Jahr dabei, weil einer oder mehrere Juroren subtile Veränderungen bemerkten und darin – deshalb wählen sie ihn – die kreative Entwicklung eines Künstlers sehen. Sie sehen, daß die Review – wie bei einer Zeitrafferaufnahme – Schritt für Schritt den Weg großer Talente festhält. (Jeder, der ein Kind großgezogen hat, weiß, daß das fortwährend Neue mit konstantem Wachstum einhergehen kann.) Die Entwicklung einzelner Künstler zu dokumentieren, ist möglicherweise einer der wesentlichen Beiträge dieser Publikation zur Geschichte des Glases als Kunstform.

Und viele Arbeiten – vielleicht die meisten – werden einfach deshalb ausgemustert, weil sie geschmacklos sind. Nicht weil sie irgendeinen Kanon des sogenannten guten Geschmacks verletzen, sondern weil sie weder Geschmack noch Gefühl oder Urteils Kraft in der Beziehung der Einzelemente an den Tag legen, keinen Sinn für Proportionen, Material, Farbe oder Form haben. Es ist schwer, für diese Fälle noch Worte zu finden. Wenn solche Arbeiten vor den Juroren auf die Leinwand projiziert werden, sagt niemand ein Wort, und die Arbeiten verschwinden einfach.

The Corning Museum of Glass

The jurying was not depressing this year. Why? Surely the knowledge and character of the visiting jurors soothed the often troubled process. Personality conflicts and strident opinions aside, it is the slides we view over two days that invariably make me wonder if it might be kinder to let this material (which we have tortured en masse over the past 30 years in the name of art) return to just being nice, straightforward tableware, windows, and lighting. This year, amid the awkward figures, crumbling pâte de verre, blown monstrosities photographed in exotic locales, and piled up planes and blobs balanced on pedestals or draped over rocks and wire, I was able to experience again an old feeling of optimism. That almost forgotten pleasure was inspired by the entries of three young Czech artists: Michal Machat, Ivana Mašitová, and Martin Velišek.

My enthusiasm was by no means a surprise. It had grown from a forgotten spark generated in 1986 by Eva Stara's article "New Forms of Painted Glass," published in Czech Glass Review. The author reviewed an annual exhibition of work by students (who would be part of the final generation) of Prof. Stanislav Libenský, in the special studio for glass art at the School of Applied Art, Prague. The story focused on a renaissance of student interest in the enameled and etched glass of the late 1940s, 1950s, and 1960s, pioneered by Libenský and fellow students of Profs. Josef Kaplický and Karel Štipl at the School of Applied Art.

Their decorated vessels dominated Czech glass design until the late 1960s, when they began to be displaced by massive cast and cut sculpture. Either polychrome enameled or engraved, the early glass shared an elegant graphic quality. At first, it depicted narrative themes (such as Libenský's series based on the Passion of Christ or scenes from everyday life), using outlines that were often acid-etched or sandblasted into the thinly blown glass.

By the 1950s, most of the designs had become abstract, sometimes patterned, influenced by Abstract Expressionism and Tachisme. The increasingly thick glass enamel was brushed and then fired onto vessels that were often tulip-shaped, with narrow bases and widely flaring bowls, or elongated into tall cylinders. Curator Lesley Jackson of the Manchester City Art Gallery in England recently suggested that the origins of this style, so characteristic of 1950s applied arts, can be traced to "the new look" initiated by Christian Dior in his post-World War II fashion designs.

The 1986 student designs were undeniably reminiscent of Libenský's earlier works in shape and style. I saw no more of it until the publication in 1989 of Verres de Bohême: 1400–1989. Side by side with painted pieces from 1958–1965 by Vladimir Kopecký, Marta Kerhartová-Pěřinová, Karel Wünsch, and František Tejml, one could see that the new works were now more iconoclastic than revivalist. An Art Brut drawing style, the way the paint was laid on the surface, and the codified words and images all contributed to an alignment with contemporary painting, including that of Erwin Eisch and Czech maverick Dana Zámečníková on glass.

As is often the case with work that is unfamiliar to me and that grabs my attention during the daily filtering process through slides, magazine articles, catalogs, and exhibition announcements, I put what I had seen in the back of my mind to incubate and to wait for what would come next. The images joined those by other emerging Czech artists, such as Milan Handl, Jaroslav Róna, Gizela Šabóková, Jaromír Rybák, Ivan Mareš, and Jiří Nekovář. This group had already initiated the shift toward a powerful new direction for Czech art and the medium of glass in general. The hope provided by this work came not only from its sound esthetic, intellectual, and expressive qualities, but also from the relief it provided from the oppressive technical and optical obsession that had dominated too much of glass sculpture (especially Czech) for too long a time.

At last, Machat, Mašitová, and Velišek now appear in the New Glass Review. We are reminded that, first and foremost, they are accomplished painters (not paint dribblers). For Machat, the body of the bottle becomes the body of his painted figure. One can convincingly argue that the glass is irrelevant. In Machat's case, I am not bothered by what I suspect to be the simple truth. Velišek's coloration can be heavy and almost completely obscure transparency; however, he always seems to give the viewer a window through the glass that forces a look beyond the surface of his three-dimensional pictures.

All three artists walk both sides of the fine, elusive, and delicious line between sophistication and vulgarity. In sharing my enthusiasm for this

In diesem Jahr war die Jurierung nicht deprimierend. Warum? Sicherlich auch, weil Wissen und Charakter der Gastjuroren dazu beigetragen haben, diesen oft so schwierigen Prozeß zu entspannen. Abgesehen von Persönlichkeitskonflikten und auseinanderstreben Auffassungen, führt bei mir das zweitägige Ansehen der Dias unweigerlich zu der Frage: Wäre es nicht gnädiger, dieses Material einfach das sein zu lassen was es ist - nette einfache Tischdekorationen, Fenster und Leuchter (Objekte also, die wir während der vergangenen 30 Jahre im Namen der Kunst stets gegeißelt haben). In diesem Jahr, inmitten von peinlichen Figuren, bröckiger pâte de verre, geblasener, in exotischen Umgebungen photographierter Monstrositäten, übereinandergeschichteter Scheiben und Tropfen, die entweder auf Sockeln balancieren oder auf Stein und Draht drapiert sind, habe ich jedoch wieder ein altbekanntes Gefühl von Optimismus verspürt. Dieses fast schon vergessene Vergnügen wurde durch die eingereichten Arbeiten dreier junger Tschechen wiederbelebt: Michal Machat, Ivana Mašitová und Martin Velišek.

Mein Enthusiasmus kam keineswegs überraschend. Es war durch einen Funken entzündet worden, den Eva Stara in ihrem 1986 in der tschechischen Glass Review erschienenen Artikel „New Forms of Painted Glass“ geschlagen hat. Die Autorin besprach dort eine Jahresausstellung von Libenský-Studenten (die der jüngsten Generation angehören) an der Hochschule für Angewandte Kunst in Prag. Der Artikel stellte besonders das wiedererwartete Interesse der Studenten am emaillierten und geätzten Glas der späten 40er, 50er und 60er Jahre heraus, ein Stil, zu dessen Pionieren Libenský und andere Schüler der Professoren Josef Kaplický und Karel Štipl an der Hochschule für Angewandte Kunst gehörten.

Ihre dekorierten Gefäße dominierten das tschechische Glasdesign bis zum Ende der 60er Jahre, bis sie durch massive gegossene und geschliffene Skulpturen abgelöst wurden. Sowohl in seiner polychrom emaillierten als auch in seiner gravierten Erscheinungsform war diesem frühen Glas eine elegante graphische Qualität zu eigen. Anfangs wurden erzählende Themen dargestellt, wie zum Beispiel Libenskýs Zyklus über die Passion Christi oder seine Szenen aus dem täglichen Leben; dabei waren die Konturen wesentlich, die oft in das dünn gebläste Glas geätzt oder sandgestrahlt wurden.

In den 50 Jahren wurden die Entwürfe unter dem Einfluß des Abstrakten Expressionismus und des Tachismus zunehmend von abstrakten Mustern bestimmt. Das Glasemaille wurde wesentlich dicker aufgebrannt, die Gefäße waren häufig tulpenförmige – mit schmalen Fuß und sich weitenden Öffnungen – oder sie verlängerten sich zu hohen Zylindern. Lesley Jackson, Kurator der City Art Gallery in Manchester (England), führte kürzlich die Ursprünge dieses für die angewandte Kunst der 50er Jahre so charakteristischen Stils auf den „New Look“ zurück, den Christian Dior nach dem Zweiten Weltkrieg mit seinen Modeentwürfen geprägt hatte.

Die Entwürfe der Studenten von 1986 erinnern in Form und Stil zweifellos an die frühen Arbeiten von Libenský. Ich habe bis zu der Publikation von Verres de Bohême: 1400–1989 davon nichts mehr gesehen. Seite an Seite mit den bemalten Arbeiten von Vladimir Kopecký, Marta Kerhartová-Pěřinová, Karel Wünsch und František Tejml aus den Jahren 1958–1965 waren dort neue Arbeiten abgebildet, die eher ikonoklastisch als rückorientiert waren. Sowohl die Zeichnungen im Stil des Art Brut als auch die Art, wie die Farbe auf die Oberfläche aufgetragen wurde, drückten zusammen mit den kodifizierten Wörtern und Bildelementen eine enge Verbindung zur zeitgenössischen Malerei aus, aber auch zu Erwin Eisch und den Glasmalereien der tschechischen „Wilden“ Dana Zámečníková.

Wie so oft bei Arbeiten, die mir unvertraut sind und die beim täglichen Ausfiltern von Dias, Zeitschriftenartikeln, Katalogen und Ausstellungsankündigungen meine Aufmerksamkeit erregen, speicherte ich das Gesehene im Hinterkopf und wartete darauf, was sich als nächstes entwickeln würde. Zu diesen Bildern kamen die anderer aufstrebender tschechischer Künstler wie Milan Handl, Jaroslav Róna, Gizela Šabóková, Jaromír Rybák, Ivan Mareš und Jiří Nekovář. Diese Gruppe hatte bereits den Wechsel zu einer kraftvollen neuen Richtung der tschechischen Kunst im allgemeinen und der Glaskunst im speziellen bewirkt. Die von dieser Arbeit genährten Hoffnungen beruhten nicht nur auf festgefügten ästhetischen, intellektuellen und expressiven Qualitäten, sondern auch auf einer Befreiung von der einengenden technischen und optischen Obsession, die den Bereich der Glasskulptur, besonders der tschechischen, zu lange und zu stark dominiert hatte.

work with others, I have learned that most viewers seem either to love or to hate it – nothing in between.

Wisely, the painters remain loyal to the vessel, just as their predecessors did. Once that anchor of form is abandoned, the object moves from "sculptural vessel" to the riskier arena of "sculpture." There, a different (and, I believe, more demanding) criterion for success must be satisfied. It is the attempted leap between the two realms that we see fall short time and time again. I suspect that it will be Mašitová's asymmetrical cubist bottles that will succeed in making the transition, should she choose to try.

My excitement over the young Czechs coincided with an intensification of my appreciation for their mentor, Stanislav Libenský, and his partner, Jaroslava Brychtová. This pair, who have collaborated for more than 40 years, may now be making the best sculpture of their career – and surely some of the world's finest sculpture in the medium of glass. It is comforting to be reminded that older generations are not necessarily always overshadowed by the new. It seems that early contributors (in almost any field) often conclude their careers with well-deserved recognition for their pioneering efforts, and perhaps for passing their knowledge on to the young. However, their current efforts may no longer survive impartial and unreserved critical consideration. Libenský and Brychtová have most assuredly made outstanding, remarkable historical and educational contributions, but more important, they continue to assert their presence as viable artists succeeding at the highest level of esthetic accomplishment. Like Libenský's promising students, anyone can benefit from studying his and Brychtová's work, whether it was made in the 1940s or today.

Jetzt endlich erscheinen Machat, Mašitová und Velišek in der New Glass Review. Es wird deutlich, daß sie in erster Linie hervorragende Maler sind (keine Farb-Kleckser). Für Machat wird die Form der Flasche zum Körper der darauf gemalten Figur. Man kann mit Überzeugung behaupten, daß das Glas dabei nebensächlich ist. Im Fall Machat stört mich nicht, was ich für die einfache Wahrheit halte. Velišeks Farbauftrag ist manchmal schwer und läßt oft kaum noch Transparenz erkennen; trotzdem scheint er aber dem Betrachter immer ein Fenster durch das Glas zu öffnen, das den Blick zwangsläufig durch die Oberfläche seiner dreidimensionalen Bilder lenkt.

Alle drei Künstler bewegen sich auf beiden Seiten der feinen, schwer definierbaren und herrlichen Trennungslinie zwischen Verfeinerung und Vulgarität. Wenn ich anderen meinen Enthusiasmus für diese Arbeiten mitteile, stelle ich immer wieder fest, daß die meisten Betrachter sie entweder lieben oder hassen – es gibt nichts dazwischen.

Die Maler bleiben klugerweise, wie auch ihre Vorgänger, dem Gefäß treu. Wird dieser Anker der Form aufgegeben, bewegt sich das Objekt vom „skulpturalen Gefäß“ in den riskanteren Bereich der „Skulptur“. Hier muß ein anderes (und, wie ich glaube, anspruchsvolleres) Kriterium für Erfolg erfüllt werden. Immer wieder müssen wir erleben, daß gerade der Versuch, diese beiden Bereiche zu verbinden, mißlingt. Ich kann mir vorstellen, daß die asymmetrischen kubistischen Flaschen von Mašitová diesen Sprung erfolgreich vollziehen könnten, wenn die Künstlerin denn einmal dazu ansetzen würde.

Meine Begeisterung für die jungen Tschechen geht Hand in Hand mit einer verstärkten Wertschätzung ihres Mentors Stanislav Libenský und seiner Partnerin Jaroslava Brychtová. Diesem Paar, das seit mehr als 40 Jahren zusammen arbeitet, gelingen im Augenblick die wohl besten Skulpturen ihrer Karriere – und die sicherlich schönsten im Bereich des Glases. Es ist erfreulich festzustellen, daß eine ältere Generation nicht unbedingt von einer neuen in den Schatten gedrängt wird. Es scheint so, als ob Vorreitern (auf fast jedem Gebiet) am Ende ihrer Karriere oft die wohlverdiente Anerkennung für ihre Pionier-Leistungen zuteil wird, wohl auch, weil sie ihr Wissen an Jüngere weitergeben. Trotzdem findet ihre aktuelle künstlerische Produktion nicht länger eine ungeteilte und uneingeschränkte kritische Würdigung. Libenskýs und Brychtovás Verdienste auf historischem und pädagogischem Gebiet sind sicherlich herausragend und bemerkenswert, wichtiger aber noch ist, daß sie nach wie vor als Künstler präsent sind, deren Arbeiten den höchsten Grad ästhetischer Vollkommenheit besitzen. So wie Libenskýs vielversprechende Schüler kann jeder vom Studium seiner und Brychtovás Werke profitieren, egal ob sie aus den 40er Jahren stammen oder von heute sind.

As a gallery owner, I found the invitation to be a guest juror for the New Glass Review irresistible. For 13 years, the Review has been making a unique contribution to the literature of glass art, and I was honored to participate in this important ongoing project. The experience proved to be a visual feast. During the two days of review, as I watched thousands of slides flash by, three at a time, it was almost too much of a good thing. At one point, I felt my cognitive mind giving way to a more instinctive, reflexive form of evaluation that permitted virtually instantaneous decision making. At its best, this was an intoxicating experience.

The two permanent panel members informed us that this year's selection process was uncharacteristically smooth because of the jury's intimate knowledge of the international glass scene. Yet in spite of our congenial jury, the task remained formidable. Our charge was to recognize innovation, but just how much change is necessary to qualify a work as legitimately new? Does evolution suffice, or should the object display radically altered qualities from the artist's previous work? As jurors, we worked diligently to be open-minded, yet consistent with our guidelines. In an effort to retain objectivity, I abstained from voting for any of the works submitted by artists with whom I have an active professional relationship. In spite of this caveat, the process remained lively as we listened to one another critique the various pieces. It is interesting to note that the guidelines allow each judge an unlimited number of solo selections. As the days progressed, this resulted in Als Galerist fand ich die Einladung, als Gastjuror an der New Glass Review mitzuwirken, unwiderstehlich. Schon seit 13 Jahren leistet die Review einen einzigartigen Beitrag zur Glasliteratur, und ich fühlte mich geehrt, an diesem wichtigen, fortdauernden Projekt teilzunehmen. Die Erfahrung erwies sich als visuelles Fest. Während der zweitägigen kritischen Durchsicht, in denen ich Tausende von Dias, immer drei auf einmal, an mir vorbeirasen sah, war es fast zuviel des Guten. Von einem bestimmten Punkt an fühlte ich, wie meine kognitive Sicht einer mehr instinktiven, reflexiven Form der Beurteilung Platz machte, die es erlaubte, praktisch augenblicklich zu entscheiden. Dies war, im positiven Sinne, eine berauscheinende Erfahrung.

Von den zwei festen Jurymitgliedern erfuhren wir, daß der Auswahlprozeß in diesem Jahr wegen der intimen Kenntnis der Glasszene durch die Jury ungewöhnlich reibungslos verlief. Aber unserer kongnialen Jury zum Trotz blieb die Aufgabe enorm. Es war unsere Aufgabe Innovatives zu erkennen, aber wieviel Änderungen sind notwendig, um eine Arbeit als legitim neu einzustufen? Reicht eine Weiterentwicklung aus, oder sollte das Objekt radikal von den früheren Arbeiten des Künstlers verschiedene Qualitäten aufweisen? Als Juroren arbeiteten wir sorgfältig und aufgeschlossen, aber immer im Einklang mit unseren Richtlinien. Aus Gründen der Objektivität enthielt ich mich der Stimme bei all den Arbeiten, die von Künstlern eingereicht worden waren, mit denen ich eine aktive Geschäftsbeziehung habe. Trotz dieser Einschränkung blieb der Prozeß lebhaft, weil wir einander bei der Kritik an some keen bargaining while we worked our way toward the requisite 100 artists. I believe that one of the strengths of the New Glass Review lies in this unique approach, which does not require jury consensus and seems to encourage idiosyncratic choices.

After achieving the goal of selecting 100 glass works, the jurors are expected to offer some insights revealed by this process. First and foremost, I must state that the slides confirmed that the field is flourishing. The 801 entrants, representing 37 different countries, verify the increasingly international nature of this phenomenon. A lamentable aspect of the new internationalism, however, is a certain stylistic homogeneity that is replacing the former multiplicity of styles. As the artists come together more frequently in international exhibitions, and at places such as the Pilchuck Glass Center, the distinctive character of regional styles is being diminished. Another remarkable fact was that there were 99 entrants from Japan, a number that would have been inconceivable only a few years ago. It is not unreasonable to assume that the Japanese will soon be playing a more important role in the world of studio glass.

This year's New Glass Review revealed an increased interest in figurative and representational work. Perhaps the compelling events occurring throughout the world are causing artists to refocus on the more traditional modes of exploring the human condition. Particularly outstanding work in this vein was submitted by Bertil Vallien, whose life-size standing figures exuded an inscrutable and powerful presence. Much of the current imagery displays a dynamic visual toughness both in the subject matter and in the application of the pigment. The works of the young generation of Czechoslovakians are most emphatic in this approach. The nascent interest in surface decoration is challenging the fascination of these artists with casting techniques, and it is the most dramatic sign of a new post-revolution attitude.

Having made these few observations, I leave to the reader the pleasure of identifying personal favorites and determining other significant currents in the glass world. After all, why should the professionals have all the fun? As a gallery director, I strive to create an environment that invites the public to explore this richly diverse field. I am satisfied that our selection panel has assembled a collection that is both stimulating and challenging. I hope that you enjoy reviewing the latest efforts of the world's glass artists as much as I did.

The jurying of slides for New Glass Review was a fascinating experience and, at the same time, a very great responsibility. As jurors, the two of us voted as a unit, counting for only one vote. (This is consistent with the way we collect; we both have to agree on a particular work before we acquire it.)

Let us make a few brief, general comments on the process by which the 2,144 slides were winnowed down to 100. Given the ground rules, it seemed thorough, fair, and hard to improve upon. Each slide was viewed multiple times, with many opportunities for jurors to change votes. We saw the slides projected when we were fresh and when we were tired, then in reverse order, and later with hand lens and light table. The jurying was generally amicable, though accompanied by plenty of debate.

Despite many years of comment on the importance of quality photographs, too many entries were handicapped by poor picture quality. Busy, distracting backgrounds and incorrect exposure were the chief problems. These are not too difficult to remedy!

We were impressed with the exuberance and virtuosity of the works submitted. They represented a broad range of techniques and ideas. It would be clever to be able to detect a shifting trend, but we could discern none; functional production pieces, architectural works, sculpture, stained glass, neon, and "gallery vessels" of all sorts were in evidence.

den verschiedenen Stücken zuhörten. Es ist interessant anzumerken, daß die Richtlinien jedem Juror eine unbegrenzte Zahl von Einzelauszeichnungen erlauben. Im Fortlauf der Tage führte das manchmal zu einem kühnen Feilschen, während wir uns auf die erforderlichen 100 Künstler hinarbeiteten. Für mich liegt eine der Stärken der New Glass Review in diesem einzigartigen Verfahren, das keinen Jurykonsens erfordert und gerade die ganz persönliche Wahl zu ermutigen scheint.

Nachdem wir das Ziel, 100 Glasarbeiten auszuwählen, erreicht haben, wird von den Juroren erwartet, daß sie Einblick in die Hintergründe gewähren. Zuallererst muß ich anmerken, daß die Dias bestätigen, daß der Bereich floriert. Die 801 Einsender aus 37 verschiedenen Ländern belegen den wachsenden internationalen Charakter dieses Phänomens. Ein bedauerlicher Aspekt des neuen Internationalismus ist indes eine gewisse Homogenität des Stils, die die frühere stilistische Vielfalt ersetzt. Weil die Künstler sich immer häufiger bei internationalen Ausstellungen treffen, an Orten wie dem Pilchuck Glass Center, verringern sich die kennzeichnenden Charakteristika der regionalen Stile. Eine andere bemerkenswerte Tatsache war, daß 99 Eingänge aus Japan kamen, eine Zahl, die vor nur wenigen Jahren noch unvorstellbar war. Es ist nicht unvernünftig anzunehmen, daß die Japaner bald eine wichtigere Rolle in der Welt des Studioglasses spielen werden.

Die diesjährige New Glass Review läßt ein deutlich gesteigertes Interesse an figurativen und bildlichen Darstellungen erkennen. Vielleicht bringen die einschneidenden Ereignisse auf der ganzen Welt die Künstler dazu, sich auf die mehr traditionellen Arten zurückzubauen, die die menschliche Existenz untersuchen. Eine besonders herausragende Arbeit wurde von Bertil Vallien eingereicht, deren lebensgroße Figuren eine unergründliche und kraftvolle Präsenz ausströmen. Viele der gegenwärtigen Darstellungen strahlen sowohl inhaltlich als auch durch die Farbgebung eine dynamische, visuelle Stärke aus. Die Arbeiten der jungen Tschechen vollziehen diesen Ansatz am nachdrücklichsten. Das ursprüngliche Interesse an dekorativer Gestaltung fordert die Begeisterung dieser Künstler für Gußtechniken heraus und ist damit das dramatischste Zeichen für eine neue post-revolutionäre Haltung. Nach diesen wenigen Feststellungen überlasse ich es dem Leser, persönliche Favoriten zu küren und andere wichtige Strömungen in der Glas-Welt festzumachen. Warum sollten schließlich nur die Professionellen dieses Vergnügen haben? Als Leiter einer Galerie bemühe ich mich darum, ein Umfeld zu schaffen, das die Öffentlichkeit einlädt, dieses reiche Gebiet zu erforschen. Ich bin zufrieden damit, daß unsere Auswahlkommission eine Kollektion zusammengestellt hat, die beides ist, anregend und herausfordernd. Ich hoffe, daß Ihnen die Durchsicht der jüngsten Arbeiten der Glaskünstler der Welt genauso gefallen wird wie mir.

Die Sichtung der Dias für die New Glass Review war eine faszinierende Erfahrung und gleichzeitig eine verantwortungsvolle Aufgabe. Als Juroren besaßen wir beide gemeinsam nur eine Stimme. (Dies entspricht der Art wir wir sammeln: Wir müssen uns erst auf eine bestimmte Arbeit einigen, ehe wir sie erwerben.)

Zunächst wollen wir ein paar kurze allgemeine Anmerkungen zu dem Prozeß machen, wie aus den 2144 eingesandten Dias 100 ausgewählt wurden. Die vorgegebenen Grundregeln sind fair, sorgfältig und kaum zu verbessern. Jedes Dia wurde wiederholt betrachtet, wodurch die Juroren mehrfach die Gelegenheit hatten, ihr Urteil zu revidieren. Wir haben die projizierten Dias in einer ausgeruhten Verfassung und ermüdet gesehen, dann in umgekehrter Reihenfolge und anschließend mit Vergrößerungsgläsern und auf dem Leuchttisch. Die Juryarbeit war im allgemeinen sehr harmonisch, obwohl es jede Menge Debatten gab.

Auch wenn schon seit Jahren darauf hingewiesen wird, wie wichtig eine gute photographische Qualität ist, waren viele Einsendungen durch eine miserable Bildqualität beeinträchtigt: Unruhige, ablenkende Hintergründe und falsche Belichtung waren die Hauptprobleme. Es wäre nicht allzu schwierig gewesen, das zu ändern!

Wir waren von der Vielfalt und Kunstfertigkeit der eingereichten Arbeiten beeindruckt, sie führten eine breite Palette von Techniken und Einfällen vor. Einen neuen, richtungweisenden Trend konnten wir aller-

"Newness" was the most problematic criterion. The works of Patti, Glancy, Dailey, Blomdahl, and several others were immediately recognizable. These pieces were clearly of the highest quality. The degree of change, though, seemed small - a subtle change in form, a more telegraphic style, a new color combination. In the end, we were convinced enough to vote for them, but a lingering doubt remains. It certainly was a difficult line to walk.

Glass vessels have been made for thousands of years. Despite this, the vessel tradition retains its strength and vitality. Of the works selected for this year's Review, our rough count suggests that approximately 45 percent are containers of one type or another. We have followed studio glass for 25 years, and must have seen thousands of vessels. It is a tribute of sorts to the artistic imagination of today's artists/designers/glassmakers that these forms represented some of the most interesting objects submitted.

For example, vessels used as, or related to, drinking glasses made up a surprisingly high percentage of the objects selected. Pieces we were especially drawn to ranged from the multi-hued "Smartware" tumblers by Valiant Glass to Brad Copping's elegant chalice, with its swirling white mists, to Susie Krasnican's mock-functional goblet and its accompanying bottle. There were novel additions to the stem and knob: Kjell Engman's Venus designed for Kosta Boda, the Shatter Glass Group's leafy applications to its "Harvest" goblets, and Ann Welch's celebratory chalice with calling birds. Richard Royal took maximum advantage of blown glass's fluidity to fabricate his towering double-ended goblet.

We thought several of the artists using the glass-surface-as-canvas approach showed interesting new work; this genre seemed particularly strong this year. In the lampworked Pondering Women, Yellow Feather, Ginny Ruffner added drawing to further embellish a piece already full of sculptural content. To her beautiful medieval-style drawings, Catherine Thompson has now added color; in Gourd Dancer, she continues to integrate drawing and form superbly. Dick Weiss, with his Portrait of Sonja, was also a clear winner in this latter regard. Martin Velišek's house or church vase and Shelley Robinson's complex inside-outside-view construction take special advantage of glass's transparency, translucency, and opacity to create a three-dimensional image. They use glass to create beautiful but slightly disturbing messages about buildings and a sense of place. Susan Kutno's evocation of springtime carried an unusual sense of pictorial space for this flattened form.

In contrast, flat glass and neon works, which would seem particularly apt for drawing and painting, were generally disappointing to us.

There were a fair number of stained glass entries, many of which were of high quality. However, newness is a different matter. The long history and familiarity of the process may work against these entries when judged by the criteria used for this Review.

The same may be true of the neon pieces. Of a competent array of neon constructions submitted, only the personal, narrative Self-Portrait by Willem Volkersz seemed sufficiently innovative and imaginative.

It speaks well for the Museum's efforts that New Glass Review entries remain consistently high each year. In addition to the Review's importance as a publication documenting what is "new" and of "good quality," it includes an extensive bibliography of articles and books on glass; the accession of all slides submitted forms a comprehensive archive recording the evolution of the medium worldwide. New Glass Review, one of many initiatives by The Corning Museum of Glass, is emblematic of its leadership and support, which have made a significant impact on the phenomenal success of glass as a "new" medium for artistic expression.

dings nicht entdecken; funktionale Gebrauchsgegenstände, Architekturarbeiten, Skulpturen, Flachglasarbeiten, Neon und „Galerie-Gefäße“ aller Art herrschten vor.

Die Frage nach dem „Neuen“ war das problematischste Kriterium. Die Arbeiten von Patti, Glancy, Daily, Blomdahl und einiger anderer waren ganz klar zu identifizieren; sie besaßen eindeutig die höchste Qualität. Der Grad des Innovativen war allerdings gering - eine kaum auszumachende formale Veränderung, telegraphischer Stil, eine neue Farbkombination. Letzten Endes waren wir überzeugt genug, um für diese Arbeiten zu stimmen, aber es blieb ein nachhaltiger Zweifel. Es war eine schwierige Gratwanderung.

Glasgefäß gibt es seit Tausenden von Jahren. Trotzdem behauptet die Tradition des Gefäßes ihre Stärke und Vitalität. Grobgerechnet sind 45% der für die diesjährige Review ausgewählten Arbeiten auf die eine oder andere Weise Behältnisse. Seit 25 Jahren verfolgen wir das Studio Glas und haben dabei Tausende von Gefäßen gesehen. Daß diese Formen sich in einigen der interessantesten eingereichten Objekte repräsentierten, kann man wohl als Beweis für den künstlerischen Einfallreichum der heutigen Künstler/Designer/Glasmacher ansehen.

Ein überraschend hoher Prozentsatz der ausgewählten Objekte bestand zum Beispiel aus Trinkgefäß. Die Arbeiten, die uns besonders zusagten, reichten von den vielfarbigen „Smartware“ Becher von Valiant Glass, über Brad Coppins elegante Kelche mit ihren weißen, nebelartigen Schlieren bis zu Susie Krasnicans die Funktionalität verstopfendem Pokal mit Flasche. Es gibt neue Variationen zu „Stil und Knospe“: Kjell Engmans für Kosta Boda entworfene Venus, die „Ernte“-Pokale der Shatter Glass Group mit ihren Blattapplikationen und Ann Welchs Operkelch mit singenden Vögeln. Richard Royal nutzte auf effektivste Weise die Formbarkeit von geblasenem Glas bei der Herstellung seines turmähnlichen Doppelkelches.

Unserer Meinung nach zeigten viele der Künstler, die Glasoberflächen wie eine Leinwand benutzen, interessante neue Arbeiten; dieses Genre scheint in diesem Jahr besonders stark vertreten zu sein. In ihrer Lampenarbeit Pondering Women, Yellow Feather fügte Ginny Ruffner Zeichnungen hinzu, um ein bereits an skulpturalen Elementen reiches Stück weiter auszuschmücken. Catherine Thompson hat ihre wunderlichen Zeichnungen im mittelalterlichen Stil jetzt koloriert; in Gourd Dancer gelingt es ihr hervorragend, Zeichnung und Form zu integrieren. Auch Dick Weiss gehörte in dieser Beziehung mit seinem Portrait of Sonja zu den eindeutigen Gewinnern. Martin Velišeks Haus- oder Kirchen-Vase und Shelley Robinsons Konstruktionen mit ihrer komplexen Innen-Außen-Doppelperspektive machen sich bei der Gestaltung von dreidimensionalen Bildern besonders Transparenz, Transluzidität und opake Eigenschaften von Glas zunutze. Sie verwenden Glas für schöne, aber auch leicht beunruhigende Aussagen über Konstruktionen und Raumgefühl. Susan Kutnos Frühlingsbeschwörung besaß für diese flache Form ein ungewöhnliches bildkompositorisches Gefühl.

Im Gegensatz dazu enttäuschten uns Flachglas- und Neonarbeiten, die naturgemäß eigentlich für Zeichnung und Bemalung prädestiniert wären.

Es gab eine ganze Reihe Beiträge aus bemaltem Glas, von denen viele eine hohe Qualität besaßen. Mit Neuem auf diesem Gebiet ist es allerdings eine andere Sache. Die lange Geschichte und seine Vertrautheit sprechen vielleicht gegen diese Beiträge, wenn man auf sie die Kriterien dieser Review anwendet.

Das gleiche gilt wohl auch für Neonarbeiten. Aus der Gruppe qualifizierter Neonkonstruktionen erschien uns nur das persönliche, narrative Self-Portrait von Willem Volkersz hinreichend innovativ und imaginativ.

Es spricht sehr für die Bemühungen des Museums, daß die Einsendungen für die New Glass Review in jedem Jahr konstant hoch sind. Zusätzlich zu der Bedeutung der Review als Publikation, in der alles dokumentiert wird, was „neu und gut“ ist, enthält sie außerdem eine ausführliche Bibliographie von Artikeln und Büchern über Glas; alle eingereichten Dias in ihrer Gesamtheit bilden ein umfassendes Archiv, das die weltweite Entwicklung des Mediums dokumentiert. Die New Glass Review, eine der vielen Initiativen des Corning Museum of Glass, ist kennzeichnend für dessen Rolle als Vorreiter und Förderer, die den phänomenalen Erfolg von Glas als „neuem“ künstlerischem Ausdrucksmittel wesentlich beeinflußt hat.

Note

In 1991, more than 5,800 copies of the New Glass Review 13 prospectus were mailed. Each entrant could submit a maximum of three slides. A total of 801 individuals and companies representing 37 countries submitted 2,144 slides. The 100 objects illustrated in this Review were selected by the four jurors, whose initials follow the descriptions of the objects they chose. (Paul and Elmerina Parkman served as co-jurors and shared one vote.)

All slides submitted to New Glass Review are retained in the Rakow Library of The Corning Museum of Glass, where they may be viewed by the public. Copies of slides published in any of the past Reviews may be purchased by special order from the Museum's Sales Department. Copies of New Glass Review 3 (1982), 10 (1989), 11 (1990), and 12 (1991) are still available from the Sales Department, which can also supply all back issues of the Review in black-and-white microfiche.

The coordinator of the New Glass Review competition at The Corning Museum of Glass would like to thank all of the artists and designers who submitted their slides for consideration. Special thanks are due to those who made this publication possible: Louise Bush, Susanne Frantz, Charlene Holland, Ernestine Kyles, Nina McPhilmy, Barbara Miller, Richard Price, and Violet Wilson.

Schlußbemerkung

Mehr als 5800 Einladungen wurden 1991 zur Teilnahme an der New Glass Review 13 versandt. Bis zu drei Dias konnten pro Person eingereicht werden. Insgesamt schickten 801 Einzelpersonen und Firmen aus 37 Ländern 2144 Dias. Die 100 Objekte, die in dieser Review abgebildet sind, wurden von den vier Jury-Mitgliedern ausgewählt, deren Initialen den Beschreibungen ihrer ausgesuchten Objekte beigefügt sind. (Paul und Elmerina Parkman hatten zusammen eine Stimme.)

Alle für die New Glass Review eingereichten Dias werden in der Rakow-Bibliothek des Corning-Glasmuseums gesammelt, wo sie der Öffentlichkeit zur Besichtigung freistehen. Kopien von Dias, die in den vergangenen Reviews erschienen sind, können durch Sonderbestellung bei der Verkaufsabteilung des Museums erworben werden. Exemplare der New Glass Review 3 (1982), 10 (1989), 11 (1990) und 12 (1991) sind noch lieferbar. Alle alten Ausgaben der Review können auch auf Schwarzweiß-Mikrofiche geliefert werden.

Der Koordinator des New-Glass-Review-Wettbewerbs beim Corning-Glasmuseum möchte sich bei allen Künstlern/Künstlerinnen und Designern bedanken, die ihre Dias zum Wettbewerb eingereicht haben. Ein besonderer Dank steht jenen zu, die diese Ausgabe ermöglicht haben: Louise Bush, Susanne Frantz, Charlene Holland, Ernestine Kyles, Nina McPhilmy, Barbara Miller, Richard Price und Violet Wilson.
