Jury Statements

How little cutting and polishing! How much self-esteem!

Fewer and fewer entries are about the traditionally admired aspects of glass – transparency, reflection, refraction, and usefulness as a container for weather and liquids – and more and more are about the makers themselves. Although this is not surprising in light of the contemporary art scene and the Studio Glass Movement, it is a powerful change in direction for the history of glass. And glass is still the unifying medium that brings us all together: factory, designer, studio, and artist.

The goal of the glassmaker from ancient times to our own century was to produce a brilliant, transparent material that would equal the colorless perfection of the finest rock crystal or the rich color of precious gemstones. It was a common purpose, just as in painting the representation of things as they appeared was a common purpose. History is dotted with milestones in both pursuits, and both have been achieved and, to some degree, made redundant.

The dark side of common purpose is mindless obedience, as we saw so horrifyingly in World War II. People were ciphers to be dealt with in large numbers. The reaction, at least in the West, was profound and, in historical terms, immediate: individuality was nurtured on an unprecedented scale. Providing a college education at government expense to every returning U.S. veteran was one aspect; another was the growth of art departments in virtually all schools, colleges, and universities. The teachers were often artists rather than professional teachers, and the emphasis was on creativity and originality. Within some of these art departments (many in the U.S.), glassmaking was included. Two generations later, the triumph of the individual is certainly at hand – and the traditional common purpose is struggling in the background. Less than 10 percent of the work chosen for this Review is intended to serve a utilitarian function, and the ultimate triumph of glass as pure and brilliant as rock crystal – the culmination of a 3,000-year struggle – is evident in only three pieces: by Christopher Hughes, Maie Mikof-Liivik, and Barbara Nanning.

The creative individual is evident everywhere, in self-portraits and private fantasies, in political statements and parodies, and in bizarre color combinations, shapes, and textures. The producer, not the consumer, is both subject and object. These glassmakers obviously believe in the importance of their message, their taste, their techniques, their invention, their temerity – and rightly so. Singly and in combination, it is remarkable: a diverse and splendid offering.

Very few factories are represented. No Venini, Orrefors, Baccarat, Steuben, Lobmeyr, Moser, Riedel, Schott, Kosta Boda, Daum, Hoya, Iwata, and Eisch – names that so recently dominated the glass world on its climb toward art. These and many others share a common, competitive purpose: to profitably produce functional vessels of high quality. What a weight! The concerns implicit in a commercial enterprise dependent on volume, market share, and return on investment define an awful esthetic hurdle. The pieces pictured on the following pages are largely one of a kind, reflective of the taste of a single individual, and, for the most part, not intended for use – use-less.

The gap between common purpose and individual expression grows as the technology of mass production improves. Caught in the middle are the handshops, increasingly dependent on innovative design to justify the price differential with the machine-made counterpart. This year, the year of "Chihuly over Venice" (a nice example of self-esteem), there was an impressive union of glass artist, studio glassmakers, and handshop factory workers. Dale Chihuly, a truly astonishing creative force, persuaded factories in Finland, Ireland, and Mexico to have their most experienced glassworkers join his glass team from the Seattle area in the making of units that he designed on location according to the skills and culture of the respective factories. The units were assembled into huge, brilliantly colored grape-like clusters and suspended from tripods at various locations around Venice – with, I am told, spectacular

Wiewenig Schliff und Poliertes! Wieviel Eigendünkel!

Weniger und weniger Einsendungen haben mit den traditionell bewunderten Aspekten von Glas zu tun – Transparenz, Widerspiegelung Brechung und der Benutzbarkeit als Behältnis für Flüssigkeiten – und mehr und mehr mit den Machern selbst. Auch wenn das im Licht der zeitgenössischen Kunstszenen und der Studioglasbewegung nicht überraschend ist, ist es eine gewaltige Richtungsänderung für die Geschichte des Glases. Und Glas ist noch immer das gemeinsame Medium, das uns alle zusammen bringt: die Hütte, den Designer, das Studio und den Künstler.

Das Ziel der Glasmacher von alters her bis in unser Jahrhundert war es, ein brillantes transparentes Material zu erzeugen, das in der farblosen Perfektion dem besten Bergkristall oder dem Farbreichtum kostbarer Edelsteine gleicht. Das war das erklärte Ziel, ähnlich wie in der Malerei, die Wiedergabe der Dinge so wie sie erscheinen. Die Geschichte ist mit Meilensteinen beider Zielsetzungen übersät, und beide sind erreicht und, bis zu einem gewissen Grad, überflüssig geworden.

Die dunkle Seite einer verallgemeinerten Zielsetzung ist gedankenloser Gehorsam wie man ihn in so erschreckender Weise im Zweiten Weltkrieg sah. Die Menschen waren Nummern mit denen man in großer Zahl umging. Die Reaktion, wenigstens im Westen, war gründlich und, in historischen Dimensionen gesehen, prompt: Individualität wurde in einem noch nie dagewesenen Ausmaß gepflegt. Die Ermöglichung einer Hochschulausbildung auf Staatskosten für jeden zurückkehrenden US Veteranen war ein Aspekt; ein anderer war das Entstehen von Kunstabteilungen an praktisch allen Schulen, Kollegs und Universitäten. Die Lehrer waren oft eher Künstler als professionell Lehrende, und die Betonung lag auf Kreativität und Originalität. Zu einigen dieser Kunstabteilungen (vielen in den USA) gehörte das Glasmachen. Zwei Generationen später liegt der Triumph des Individuellen sicherlich auf der Hand – und der traditionelle Gemeinsinn kämpft im Hintergrund. Weniger als 10 Prozent der Arbeiten, die für diese Review ausgewählt wurden, haben die Absicht, eine Gebrauchsfunktion zu erfüllen, und der höchste Triumph von Glas, so rein und brillant wie Bergkristall zu sein – der Höhepunkt eines 3000jährigen Bemühens – wird nur bei drei Arbeiten sichtbar: der von Christopher Hughes, Maie Mikof-Liivik und Barbara Nanning.

Das kreative Individuum ist überall anzutreffen, in Selbstporträts und privaten Phantasien, in politischen Statements und Parodien und in bizarren Farbkombinationen, Formen und Texturen. Der Produzent, nicht der Konsument, ist sowohl Subjekt als auch Objekt. Diese Glasmacher glauben offensichtlich an die Wichtigkeit ihrer Botschaft, ihres Geschmacks, ihrer Technik, ihrer Erfindungsgabe, ihrer Verwegenheit – und richtig so. Einzelne und in Kombination sind sie bemerkenswert: ein vielfältiges und großartiges Angebot.

Wenig Hütten sind vertreten. Weder Venini, Orrefors, Baccarat, Steuben, Lobmeyr, Moser, Riedl, Schott, Kosta Boda, Daum, Hoya, noch Iwata oder Eisch – Namen, die noch jüngst die Glaswelt bei ihrem Aufstieg zur Kunst dominierten. Diese und viele andere teilen ein gemeinsames und konkurrierendes Ansinnen: profitabel Gefäße auf hohem Niveau zu produzieren. Was eine Aufgabe! Die Interessen implizieren in einem kommerziellen Unternehmen, das von der Masse, dem Marktanteil und der Kapitalanlage abhängt, furchtbare ästhetische Hürden. Die Arbeiten, die auf den folgenden Seiten zu sehen sind, sind zu einem großen Teil Unikate und spiegeln den Geschmack eines Individuums wider und sind in fast allen Fällen nicht Zweckbestimmt – zwecklos.

Die Lücke zwischen einer aufs allgemeine gerichteten Ausdrucksweise und einer individuellen nimmt in dem Maß zu, in dem sich die Massenproduktion verbessert. Mittendrin gefangen sind die Geschenkeläden, die zunehmend von innovativem Design abhängig sind, um das Preisgefälle zwischen Hüttenarbeiten und ihrem Gegenpart zu rechtfertigen. In diesem Jahr, dem Jahr von „Chihuly over Venice“ (ei-effect. This enterprise and its accompanying promotion, books, and films brought factory workers into the art world and simultaneously changed the scale of glass art. Chihuly established a common purpose, limited and not profitable but hugely exciting: a major moment in the history of glass. Ironically, the great clusters of glass forms were named "Chandeliers," but they gave off no light save what they reflected – moons, not suns; art, not utility.

The union of talent represented by Chihuly's enterprise leans heavily on the art of photography: his glasses exist in the round, but most of them are known largely as flat pictures, as are the objects presented in the New Glass Review. Each year, the works submitted to the Review become better, and many are stunning images in their own right, the work of glass artists becoming picture makers. In several instances, it takes a real effort to pull the piece out of its dramatic lighting, monumental sight level, and center-stage importance in order to grasp what it really is. I often fail (in the case of Yumi Oguchi, for example), and simply cannot put it on the kitchen table of my imagination. An exception is Jaromír Rybák's Aquatic Inhabitant: a benign predator, shiny and rough, clear and opaque, picture and object as provocative in my house as in a museum.

The self-esteem in which these glassmakers hold their work is evident in its presentation. Like super stars glowing in their own light, the objects appear sanctified. (The reverse of this is the catalog photograph that intends to convey as much information with as little commentary as possible.) There is a delightful democracy in this phenomenon: the artist as final authority putting forth what he or she values, as opposed to the common values of a marketplace.

On the other hand, we are minuscule. Millions who use glass daily have never heard of any of us, and probably never will. The functions glass serves increase steadily without us, as do the pounds per capita worldwide. Even at the art end, it is worth remembering that the most highly valued glass objects ever sold at auction were functional objects made at least a century ago.

Coinciding with the jury sessions for this New Glass Review, the New Yorker magazine of January 27 ran a review by Garry Wills of a new translation of Homer's great epic the Odyssey. Wills lavished high praise indeed on this work, drawing attention, in the process, to its "political correctness"(!) in terms of a modern reader's assessment of Homer's presentation of female characters.

As is to be expected, each new translation of the Odyssey (and there have been many) brings forth a variety of amendments, fresh insights, and updated turns of phrase. I raise the subject here because Homer has often been cited in terms of glass history – notably for his occasional mention of a substance called "kyanos," long assumed to have been an early type of glass, albeit in the form of a paste or enamel.

nem netten Beispiel von Eigendünkel), gab es eine beeindruckende Zusammenarbeit von Glaskünstlern, Studioarbeitern und Hüttenarbeitern für Geschenkeläden. Dale Chihuly, eine wahrhaft erstaunliche kreative Kraft, hat Hütten in Finnland, Irland und Mexiko überzeugen können, ihre erfahrensten Glasbläser zur Zusammenarbeit mit seinem Team aus Seattle abzustellen, um Stücke zu fertigen, die er vor Ort mit Berücksichtigung der technischen Fähigkeiten und Kultur der jeweiligen Hütten entworfen hat. Die einzelnen Stücke wurden zu riesigen in brillanten Farben leuchtenden traubenähnlichen Gebilden zusammengestellt und an verschiedenen Örtlichkeiten in Vendig auf Dreifüßen installiert, mit, so habe ich mir sagen lassen, einem spektakulären Effekt. Dieses Unternehmen und seine begleitende Promotion, Bücher und Filme, haben Hüttenarbeiter in die Glaswelt geführt und gleichzeitig den Maßstab der Glaswelt geändert. Chihuly hat eine allgemeine Ausdrucksweise etabliert, die begrenzt ist und nicht profitabel aber ungeheuer aufregend: ein bedeutender Meilenstein in der Geschichte des Glases. Ironischerweise wurde die riesige traubenhäufige Anhäufung von Glas „Chandelier“ (Kronleuchter) getauft, aber sie geben kein Licht ab, reflektieren was sie aufgenommen haben – Monde, keine Sonnen; Kunst, nicht Gebrauch.

Der Zusammenschluß der Talente, wie er in Chihulys Unternehmung vorgeführt wird, stützt sich entscheidend auf die Kunst der Fotografie: seine Glasarbeiten sind dreidimensional, und trotzdem sind sie zum größten Teil nur als zweidimensionale Bilder bekannt, ähnlich wie die Objekte in der New Glass Review. Jedes Jahr werden die Arbeiten, die zur New Glass Review eingereicht werden, besser, und viele sind hervorragende Bilder in und für sich, Arbeiten von Glasmachern, die Bildkünstler werden. Verschiedentlich erfordert es eine wirkliche Anstrengung, die Arbeiten aus einer dramatischen Beleuchtung, einer Monumentalansicht und einer in den Mittelpunkt gestellten Absicht zu befreien, um einen Eindruck dessen zu erheischen, was sie wirklich sind. Oft mißlingt es mir (beispielsweise im Fall von Yumi Oguchi), und ich kann die Arbeit einfach nicht auf den Küchentisch meiner Imagination plazieren. Eine Ausnahme ist Jaromír Rybáks Aquatic Inhabitant: ein wohlwollendes Raubtier, leuchtend und rauh, durchsichtig und opak, Bild und Objekt, bei mir zuhause ebenso provokativ wie in einem Museum.

Der Eigendünkel mit dem diese Glasmacher ihre Arbeit sehen, wird durch deren Präsentation offensichtlich. Wie Superstars, die in ihrem eigenen Licht glühen, haben die Objekte den Anschein von etwas Heiligem. (Das Gegenteil davon ist die Abbildung im Katalog, die versucht, möglichst viel Information mit möglichst wenig Kommentar zu vermitteln.) In diesem Phänomen liegt eine wunderbare Demokratie: der Künstler als letzliche Autorität stellt heraus was er oder sie für wert erachtet, im Gegensatz zu den allgemeinen Werten des Marktes.

Auf der anderen Seite sind wir klein. Millionen, die täglich Glas benutzen, haben noch nie von irgendjemand von uns gehört und werden es wahrscheinlich auch nicht. Die Zwecke, denen Glas dient, nehmen ständig zu, ohne uns, so wie weltweit die Pfunde. Selbst am Kunsthändler lohnt es sich, sich daran zu erinnern, daß die am höchsten taxierten Glasobjekte, die jemals auf einer Auktion verkauft wurden, funktionale Gegenstände sind, die vor mindestens hundert Jahren gefertigt wurden.

Zur gleichen Zeit wie die Jurysitzung für diese New Glass Review brachte das New Yorker Magazin am 27. Januar eine Rezension von Garry Wills über eine neue Übersetzung von Homers großem Epos der Odyssee. Wills bedachte diese Arbeit tatsächlich mit einem großen Lob, wobei er die Aufmerksamkeit auf deren „political correctness“(!) im Sinn der Einschätzung durch den modernen Leser von Homers Darstellung weiblicher Charaktere lenkt.

Wie zu erwarten, bringt jede neue Übersetzung der Odyssee (und es hat viele gegeben) eine Vielzahl von Neuerungen, von neuen Einblicken und aktualisierten Redewendungen. Ich erwähne das Thema hier, weil Homer oft in der Glasgeschichtsschreibung zitiert worden ist – besonders für die gelegentliche Erwähnung einer Substanz namens „kyanos“, Fickle world that it is, Homer's character Alcinous isn't much in the news these days, in spite of his having been the "mighty" and "divinely inspired" king of Phaeacia, husband to the "wise" Arete, and father of Nausicaa of the "white arms" and long limbs, whose name (unfortunate as it sounds to the modern ear) was romantically linked (as our journalists would have it) with that of Odysseus himself.

In the midst of Homer's story, we read about the magnificent palace of Alcinous with its great bronze threshold, its radiant "high-roofed" halls, and walls that are topped by a frieze of dark blue "kyanos." For Alcinous, then, as for the "wise" Arete and the "peerless" (read "drop-dead gorgeous") Nausicaa, glass was not the crystal-clear, thin-walled substance, fashioned into hollow or billowing forms, that it would later become in its most popular incarnation.

Rather, for the sainted family of Alcinous and for others like them, glass was a richly colored, even dark and mysterious substance. And it was integral to a greater or decorative scheme that was intended, abstract though it may have been, to communicate a sense of status, of authority – and of character, perhaps – to all newcomers. It had, in part, what might be described as a "narrative" purpose.

So, too, as it happens, do a great many of the present New Glass Review offerings. They reveal some kind of narrative or allegorical intent on the part of the artist. This intent may be fugitive or nonspecific in nature, but a narrative or metaphorical quality is – to my mind, at least – a distinguishing feature of some of the best of the current work viewed by this year's panel of jurors. It should also be said that some very fine work did not, necessarily, fall within this description, as will be evident in the reproductions.

Certainly, though, a number of the present works employed opaque and intensely pigmented glass in a way that would have caused no heartache to Alcinous, Arete, and Nausicaa. That said, the likes of Alcinous, paradigm of tolerance as I suspect he was, would have had no "truck" (as Homer would not have said) with the way in which some of the submissions aspired to a sculptural scale and a sculptural conception of form. Not that big AI would have been opposed to "sculptural" or "conceptual" work per se. But I am sure that he would have wished (as we do) that it be handled as well as "sculptural" and "conceptual" work beyond the realms of glass practice – or in as convincing a manner as the best installation work that doesn't involve glass at all.

Nonetheless, I was particularly partial to the conceptual and formal sophistication of the larger-scale submissions from James Carpenter (Dichroic Light Field), Paul Marioni and Ann Troutner (Shelter), Josef Marek (Cylinder in Prism), Ivana Srámková-Solcová (Childhood), Willem Volkersz (After the Storm), Nani Croze (Bottle Bosoms; you don't get more "sculptural" than this), Laurentiu Anghelache (Embroidery of Dew), and Takeshi Fukunishi (Core-II).

In respect of smaller-scale work, I admired the wit of Donna Zalusky's Contemporary Artifact and Kathleen Mulcahy's Rapture, the succinct symbolism of Jane Bruce's Red Powersticks with Velvet Cover, the tight composition of Mary Shaffer's Wall Flow '96, the star-burst energy of Czeslaw Zuber's untitled big fragment, and the unfolding pageant of Minako Shirakura's As a Life Circles Around. . . .

For sheer elegance of statement, I would draw attention to the work of Alessandro Diaz de Santillana, Sylvie Vandenhoucke, Paul Stankard, Nick Mount, and Carlo Moretti. The last three of these artists demonstrated that fresh and convincing variations can be discerned within familiar themes.

And it remains for me to record, before closing, my delight in the sumptuously biomorphic forms of John Leighton, in the crisp classicism of Etienne Leperlier and of Ben Edols and Kathy Elliott, in the elusive and poignant imagery of Masayo Odahashi, in the open-structure mayhem of Hank Murta Adams, and in the sharp eye and judgment of John Drury and Susan Stinsmuehlen-Amend. My support of other works is indicated by my initials, which are recorded with the entries for which I voted.

The selection sessions, which began with an eerie sensation that every second or third entry featured either a bear (of the cuddly toy kind) or a mesh of beads (of the tiny and brightly colored kind), became, for this juror, a fully rewarding experience. But there were moments, as there must always be, when the uniform facial expressions of the panel may well have recalled Homer's description of Odysseus's revenge on von der man lange annahm, sie sei eine frühe Form von Glas gewesen, wenn auch in Form einer Paste oder eines Emails.

Unbeständig wie die Welt ist, ist von Homers Charakter Alcinous heutzutage nicht viel die Rede, obwohl er der „mächtige“ und „göttlich inspirierte“ König von Phaeacia, Gatte der „weisen“ Arete, und Vater von Nausicaa mit den „weißen Armen“ und langen Gliedmaßen, dessen Name (unglücksverheißend wie er für das moderne Ohr klingt) romantischerweise mit dem von Odysseus selbst verknüpft wurde (so wie es unser Zeitungsstil heute benennen würde).

In der Mitte der Entwicklung dieses berauschen Plots lesen wir von Alcinous großartigem Palast mit seinen großen bronzenen Türschwellen, seinen strahlenden „hochaufragenden“ Hallen und Wänden, die von einem Fries aus dunkelblauem „kyanos“ begrenzt sind. Für Alcinous also ist ebenso wie für die „weise“ Arete und die „unvergleichliche“ (heute: „affenturbogelle“) Nausicaa Glas nicht die kristallklare, dünnwandige Substanz, angepaßt an hohle oder aufgeblähte Formen, zu der sie später in ihrer populärsten Inkarnation wurde.

Vielmehr war für die selige Familie des Alcinous und andere wie sie, Glas eine farbenreiche, sogar dunkle und geheimnisvolle Substanz. Es war in ein größeres oder dekoratives Schema integriert, das dazu da war, obgleich vielleicht etwas abstrakt, ein Gefühl von Status, von Autorität – und von Charakter möglicherweise – den Neuankömmlingen zu vermitteln. Es hatte zum Teil etwas, das man als „narrativen“ Zweck umschreiben könnte.

Wie es sich gerade trifft, tun das auch sehr viele der Angebote der gegenwärtigen New Glass Review. Sie enthalten auf Seiten des Künstlers eine Art narrativer oder allegorischer Absicht. Diese Absicht kann flüchtig oder ihrer Natur nach unspezifisch sein, dennoch ist ein Gefühl für das Narrative oder für eine metaphorische Basis oder einen solchen Verlauf – meiner Meinung nach wenigstens – ein wahrnehmbares Charakteristikum einiger der besten gegenwärtigen Arbeiten, die das Komitee der Juroren in diesem Jahr gesehen hat. Man sollte aber auch sagen, daß einige sehr gute Arbeiten nicht unbedingt unter diese Beschreibung fallen, wie die Abbildungen deutlich machen.

Sicherlich aber haben eine ganze Anzahl von heutigen Arbeiten opakes, „trübsinniges“ und intensiv pigmentiertes Glas auf eine bestimmte Art verwendet, die Alcinous, Arete und Nausicaa keinen Kummer gemacht hätte. Das dahin gestellt, hätten solche wie Alcinous, obwohl ich vermute, daß er, gleichwohl ein Paradigma an Toleranz, keinen Bock (so hätte sich Homer nicht ausgedrückt), auf solche Beiträge gehabt, die nach einem skulpturalen Format und einer skulpturalen Konzeption der Form streben. Nicht, daß der große AI per se gegen „skulpturale“ oder „konzeptionelle“ Arbeiten gewesen wäre. Aber ich bin sicher, daß er gewünscht hätte (so wie wir), daß sie genausogut gemacht seien wie die „skulpturalen“ und „konzeptuellen“ Arbeiten jenseits des Einzugsgebietes von Glas – oder auf so überzeugende Weise wie die besten Installationsarbeiten, die Glas überhaupt nicht berücksichtigen.

Nichtsdestotrotz hatte ich eine besondere Vorliebe für den konzeptuellen und formalen Anspruch der großformatigen Beiträge von James Carpenter (Dichroic Light Field), Paul Marioni und Ann Troutner (Shelter), Josef Marek (Cylinder in Prism), Ivana Srámková-Solcová (Childhood), Willem Volkersz (After the Storm), Nani Croze (Bottle Bosoms), man kann nichts skulpturaleres haben), Laurentiu Anghelache (Embroidery of Dew) und Takeshi Fukunishi (Core-II).

Mit Blick auf kleinformatigere Arbeiten bewundere ich den Witz von Donna Zalusky's Contemporary Artifact und Kathleen Mulcahys Rapture, den lakonischen Symbolismus von Jane Bruges Red Powersticks with Velvet Cover, die kompakte Komposition von Mary Shaffers Wall Flow '96 und die sternenreiche Energie von Czeslaw Zubers Fragment ohne Titel und die sich entfaltende Aufführung von Minako Shirakuras As a Life Circles Around . . .

Wegen der puren Eleganz ihrer Aussage möchte ich die Aufmerksamkeit auf die Arbeiten von Alessandro Diaz de Santillana, Sylvie Vandenhoucke, Paul Stankard, Nick Mount und Carlo Moretti lenken. Die drei letztgenannten Künstler beweisen, daß frische und überzeugende Variationen bei vertrauten Themen zu finden sind.

Bevor ich schließe, bleibt meine Begeisterung über die kostbar biomorphe Formen von John Leighton festzuhalten, über den klaren Klassizismus von Etienne Leperlier und Ben Edols und Kathy Elliott, die flüchtigen und schwer zu begreifenden Bilder von Masayo Odahashi, the no-good gentlemen callers who pressed their cause with the faithful Penelope during the interminable absence of her husband:

Horror swept through the suitors, faces blanching white. . .

The equivalent sensation at Corning was, I hasten to advise, of a momentary nature only.

This commentary is being written late, as it is every year. Although the jury statements seldom inspire any feedback (thus reinforcing the strong suspicion that they are left unread), I still find this task one of the year's most nerve-racking. Is there anything useful that one can briefly say about such an extensive and jumbled assortment? In recent Reviews, my approach has been to pick out a number of works and to try to explain, in just a few words, why I found them worth selecting. Here are this year's choices:

Karl R. Berg has built his reputation on fastidiously crafted geometric sculptures of cut and polished optical glass. Diamond is the first work I have seen of his that seems to incorporate any element of its maker. Instead of a prism of the most sanitary and distant kind, I read Diamond as Berg's acknowledgment of and comment on the historical context of his craft and esthetic – specifically, the inability of much optical glass sculpture to be of any more relevance than as a giant glass jewel.

Cristiano Bianchin is one of a small group of individuals who provide the hope of renewal for quality design in the Muranese glass industry. His Nests and his earlier mosaic glass vessels embody that elusive, balanced combination of elegance and eccentricity that characterized Carlo Scarpa's work for Venini & C. during the late 1940s and 1950s.

Christian Sieger's designs for Ritzenhoff pilsner glasses continue the innovations initiated with the firm's "Milk Glass" series. A diverse group of artists and designers are asked for decoration ideas that can be applied to machine-made vessels. Ritzenhoff's success proves again that mass-produced glass does not have to be visual punishment for the consumer seeking relatively inexpensive and truly functional tableware.

Akihiro Isogai's carved vessel does indeed conjure up the image of its title: Spring (Fountain). Squat and hugging the ground, it has a rim carved to a thin, scalloped edge. The narrow, cellular ribs vary in texture and translucency as they progress from top to bottom. The vessel is uncomplicated, and it has an interesting, inviting texture. It also accomplishes the nearly impossible – that is, presenting a beautiful new interpretation of the most basic form of all: the bowl. I also voted for Massimo Lunardon's Purusha for its sensual appeal. The egg shapes bring to mind tulip bulbs, blossoms, and a Dutch tulip vase. The colors are quiet, and the glass is finished with a matte surface that gives it the look and presumed feeling of old silk.

Although I believed myself to be free from the grasp of incredibly delicate, "just-begging-to-be-crushed" pâte de verre, I find that I am not. The deep, skinny shape of Sylvie Vandenhoucke's vessel hovers above an impossibly narrow base of fine, bristling spines. It is perfect. There is something compelling about a creation that defies all reason or practicality, and that coexists with us purely to delight. This one does it das offen strukturierte Chaos von Hank Murta Adams und die scharfe Beobachtung und Beurteilung von John Drury und Susan Stinsmuehlen-Amend. Mein Votum für andere Arbeiten ist durch meine Initialen gekennzeichnet, die bei allen Beiträgen, für die ich gestimmt habe, vermerkt sind.

Die Auswahl sitzung, die mit der unheimlichen Sensation begann, daß jede zweite oder dritte Einsendung entweder einen Bären (von der Art knuddliger Spielzeuge) oder ein Gewirk aus Perlen (die von der winzigen, farbig leuchtenden Art) zeigte, wurde, für diesen Juroren, zu einer überaus lohnenden Erfahrung. Aber es gab Momente, wie es sie immer geben muß, in denen der übereinstimmende Gesichtsausdruck des Komitees sehr wohl an Homers Beschreibung von Odysseus' Rache an den nichtsnutzigen Herrenbesuchern hätte erinnern können, die die getreue Penelope während der endlosen Abwesenheit ihres Gatten unter Druck gesetzt hatten:

Grausen ergriff die Freier,
Gesichter wurden totenblau . . .

Ein ähnlicher Eindruck war in Corning, es freut mich, das berichten zu können, nur von momentaner Natur.

Dieser Kommentar wird spät geschrieben, so wie jedes Jahr. Obwohl die Jury Statements selten zu einem Feedback anregen (wodurch die Vermutung untermauert wird, daß sie ungelesen bleiben), ist diese Verpflichtung noch immer eine der nervenaufreibendsten des Jahres. Gibt es irgendetwas nützliches, was man in Kürze über solch ein umfassendes und durcheinander gewürfeltes Sortiment sagen kann? In den letzten Reviews bin ich folgendermaßen verfahren; ich habe eine bestimmte Zahl von Arbeiten herausgepickt und versucht, in wenigen Worten zu erklären warum ich fand, daß sie es verdient hatten ausgewählt zu werden. Hier ist die diesjährige Auswahl:

Karl R. Berg hat sich seinen Namen mit anspruchsvoll gemachten geometrischen Skulpturen aus geschliffenem und poliertem optischen Glas gemacht. Diamond ist die erste Arbeit von ihm, die ich gesehen habe, die einen Aspekt ihres Machers miteinschließt. An Stelle eines Prismas der höchst hygienischen und distanzierten Art lese ich Diamond als Bergs Wertschätzung und Kommentar zum historischen Kontext seines Handwerks und dessen Ästhetik – insbesondere zur Unfähigkeit vieler optischer Glasskulpturen noch irgendetwas anderes zu sein als ein riesiges Glasjuwel.

Christiano Bianchin ist einer aus einer kleinen Gruppe einzelner, der die Hoffnung auf die Erneuerung von Qualitätsdesign in der Muranese Glasindustrie nährt. Seine Nests und seine früheren Mosaikglasgefäße verkörpern die schwer zu fassende, ausgewogene Kombination von Eleganz und Exzentrik, die Carlo Scarpas Arbeit für Venini & C. in den späten 40er und 50er Jahren charakterisiert.

Christian Siegers Entwürfe für Ritzenhoff Pilsgläser setzen die Innovationen fort, die mit der „Milchglas“ Serie der Firma begründet wurde. Eine breit gefächerte Gruppe von Künstlern und Designern wird um Dekorationsideen gebeten, die man auf die maschinell erstellten Gefäße applizieren kann. Ritzenhoffs Erfolg beweist erneut, daß Glas aus der Massenproduktion keine visuelle Bestrafung für den Verbraucher sein muß, der nach relativ preiswertem und wirklich funktionalem Gebrauchsgeschirr sucht.

Akihiro Isogais geschnittenes Gefäß beschwört tatsächlich eine Vorstellung seines Titels herauf: Spring (Fountain). Gedrungen wirkend, hat es einen Rand, der zu einer dünnen, bogenförmig verzierten Kante geschnitten ist. Die schmalen, zellenförmigen Rippen variieren in Textur und Durchsichtigkeit im Verlauf von oben nach unten. Das Gefäß ist unkompliziert und hat eine interessant, einladende Textur. Darüber hinaus erreicht es das fast Unmögliche – nämlich eine wunderschöne neue Interpretation der grundsätzlichsten Form überhaupt zu präsentieren: der Schale. Ich habe auch für Massimo Lunardons Purusha wegen seiner sinnlichen Wirkung gestimmt. Die Eierformen erinnern an Tulpenzwiebeln, Blüten und eine holländische Tulpenvase. Die Farben sind ruhig quietly. It is not Vandenhoucke's only success. Her other two entries were just as exquisite.

Paul Marioni has used variations of the jaguar mask in previous samplings of Latin American and pre-Columbian motifs. His objects are always interesting as gringo interpretations and as respectful homage. In this example, the molten quality of form and the fiery jolt of color provided by the material enable the artist to come closer to recapturing the spirit of the original source.

As she has done in the past, Barbara Idzikowska introduces this year an unexpected and satisfying combination of technique and imagery. A painting of a goddess, floating in a cloud bed of three-dimensional glass, tweaks Rococo trompe l'oeil's airy lavishness and alludes to a dozen other historic models. The pairing of painted sheet glass and framework brings to mind new possibilities that will no doubt appear in future issues of the Review.

Father in Uniform, 1945 by Dick Weiss and Walt Lieberman combines the best qualities of both artists' painting styles. Weiss renders stark, anxious near-caricatures of himself, friends, and family in impasto. Lieberman builds up his smoky portraits with layer over layer of fired enamels until the color is dense, glowing, and deeply rich. Together, Weiss's character study and Lieberman's disciplined proficiency at exploiting the enamel effects form a work of insight and sensitivity that surpasses their solo efforts.

The imagination of Jaromír Rybák is a bit overwhelming. Are his sometimes terrifying, sometimes ridiculous creatures born in his nightmares? Do his stylized landscapes have more in common with Saturday morning children's cartoons or with Chinese jade carvings? Where did the sixties, tie-dyed T-shirt palette come from? Who is this guy? Of course, everyone knows that Rybák is an artist who lives in Prague and usually works in cast glass. The longer I look at his sculpture, the less I understand it and the more I like it. It is often extreme and unpredictable. When it misses, it misses in a big way, but when it is right, it is nicely unsettling.

The Samurai figure by Loren Stump is pure decoration. I voted for it because it is worth recognizing for its excellence of craftsmanship. Stump is part of the growing new generation of framewokers in the United States who have seized upon the technique and are casting about for something to do with it. Beads and intricate murrine are usually the result. Some of the work is extraordinary. However, most of the framewokers lack formal art training, and it shows. While art school in no way guarantees the production of art, the members of this group – like almost everyone else who makes things – would benefit greatly from basic drawing, life drawing, and design classes. The results might then begin to approach the quality of framed miniatures from centuries past.

When the Bottle Bosoms slides by Nani Croze came up on the projection screen, the panel shouted in unison, "In!" Are they indigenous architecture making good use of recycled bottles? To be honest, we did not know a thing about them. I do believe that I can speak for my co-jurors in saying that these works are beautiful in their huge simplicity, their lack of pretension, and – if they really are structures in which to bathe – their resourceful utility.

Of all the works I admired in this year's Review (and there are more than I have cited here), the one that I would most like to stand in front of is Embroidery of Dew by Laurentiu Anghelache. The piece is temporary; such a tenuous web could never withstand the elements. In that vulnerability lies part of the appeal of all glass. Placing the torn basket weave in nature reamplifies its metaphors, and while the references are multiple and obvious, they are eternally meaningful to the viewer.

One final note: As in every New Glass Review, there were selections made by one or more members of the jury that were vigorously contested by one or more of the others. Such an occurrence is more the norm than the exception, and strong personal commitment – as opposed to subordination to consensus – is encouraged. That is why the initials of each juror are placed alongside the pieces he or she supported. Nevertheless, this year I feel compelled to speak up due to the inclusion of two particular pieces: one that is blatantly "derivative" of another artist's work, and a second that is inappropriate to a competition that seriously attempts to seek out not only what is new, but also what is good. You may think me an elitist (and you may be correct), yet I still believe that und das Glas hat seinen letzten Schliff durch eine matte Oberfläche erhalten, die ihm das Aussehen und mutmaßliche Gefühl von alter Seide gibt.

Obwohl ich geglaubt habe, mich selbst nicht in der Gewalt eines unglaublich delikaten pâte de verre zu befinden, das danach „schreit, zerdrückt zu werden“, merke ich, daß ich doch nicht frei davon bin. Die tiefe dünne Form von Silvie Vandenhouckes Gefäß schwebt über einem unglaublich schmalen Unterteil aus feinen abstehenden Nadeln. Es ist perfekt. Es gibt etwas unwiderstehliches in einer Kreation, die sich jeglicher Vernunft und Praktikabilität widersetzt, und die neben uns existiert, rein zur Freude. Dieses hier tut das leise. Es ist nicht Vandenhouckes einziger Erfolg. Ihre anderen beiden Einsendungen waren ebenso ausgezeichnet.

Paul Marioni hat schon früher Variationen der Jaguarmaske von lateinamerikanischen und präkolumbianischen Motiven verwendet. Seine Objekte sind immer als Gringointerpretationen und respektvolle Hommage interessant. In diesem Beispiel ermöglichen die geschmolzene Qualität der Form und die glühende Wirkung der Farbe des Materials es dem Künstler, noch mehr den Geist der ursprünglichen Quelle einzufangen.

Wie schon in der Vergangenheit stellt Barbara Idzikowska dieses Jahr eine unerwartete und zufriedenstellende Kombination aus Technik und Fantasie vor. Ein Gemälde einer Göttin, die in einem Wolkenbett aus dreidimensionalem Glas schwebt, ironisiert die luftige Großzügigkeit von Rokoko Trompe l'Oeils und spielt auf ein Dutzend weiterer historischer Vorbilder an. Die Kombination von bemaltem Flachglas und Lampenarbeit führt neue Möglichkeiten vor, die zweifellos in zukünftigen Ausgaben der Review auftauchen werden.

Father in Uniform, 1945 von Dick Weiss und Walt Lieberman kombiniert die besten Eigenschaften des Malstils beider Künstler. Weiss legt krasse ängstliche Beinahekarikaturen von sich, Freunden und der Familie in Impasto vor. Lieberman baut seine dunstigen Porträts Schicht um Schicht aus gebranntem Email auf bis die Farbe dicht, glühend und sehr satt ist. Gemeinsam führen Weiss' Charakterstudie und Liebermans disziplinierte Fertigkeit, die Effekte von Email auszunutzen, zu einer verständnisvollen und empfindungsreichen Arbeit, die ihre jeweils einzelnen Bemühungen übertrifft.

Die Fantasie von Jaromír Rybák ist ein bißchen überwältigend. Wurden seine manchmal furchterregenden, manchmal komischen Geschöpfe in seinen Alpträumen geboren? Haben seine stilisierten Landschaften mehr mit Zeichentrickfilmen für Kinder samstagsmorgens im Fernsehen zu tun oder mit chinesischen Jadeschnitzereien? Woher stammt die gebatikte 60er Jahre T-shirt Palette? Wer ist dieser Typ? Selbstverständlich weiß jeder, daß Rybák ein Künstler ist, der in Prag lebt und für gewöhnlich mit gegossenem Glas arbeitet. Je länger ich seine Skulptur betrachte desto weniger verstehe ich sie und umso mehr gefällt sie mir. Sie ist häufig extrem und unvorhersehbar. Wenn sie fehlschlägt, dann auf ganzer Linie, wenn sie gelingt, dann ist es schön und verwirrend.

Die Samurai Figur von Loren Stump ist reine Dekoration. Ich habe für sie gestimmt weil sie es wert ist, daß man ihre exzellente Handwerkskunst wahrnimmt. Stump gehört zu der wachsenden neuen Generation von Lampenarbeitern in den Vereinigten Staaten, die die Technik aufgenommen haben und nach Möglichkeiten suchen, etwas damit anzufangen. Perlen oder komplizierte Murrine sind für gewöhnlich das Ergebnis. Manche der Arbeiten sind außergewöhnlich. Trotzdem entbehren die meisten Lampenarbeiter eine formale Kunstausbildung, und das sieht man. Während Kunstschulen in keiner Weise den Ausstoß von Kunst garantieren, würden Mitglieder dieser Gruppe – wie fast jeder, der etwas macht – einen großen Nutzen aus Kursen in Basistechniken des Zeichnens, Naturstudien und Design ziehen. Die Ergebnisse könnten sich dann der Qualität annähern, die in vergangenen Jahrhunderten mit Lampenarbeit erreicht wurde.

Als die Bottle-Blossoms-Dias von Nani Croze auf die Leinwand projiziert wurden, rief das Komitee einstimmig „ja“. Handelt es sich um eine eingeborene Architektur, die sich recycle Flaschen zunutze macht? Um ehrlich zu sein, wir wußten nichts über sie. Ich glaube, daß ich für meine Mitjuroren sprechen kann, wenn ich sage, daß diese Arbeiten in ihrer ungeheueren Einfachheit wunderschön sind, in ihrem Mangel an Anmaßung und – wenn es sich wirklich um Strukturen handelt, in denen man wirklich schwelgen kann – ihrer einfallsreichen Benutzbarkeit.

work so lacking in ambition should not be encouraged, even in the giftware market for which it was created.

Von all den Arbeiten, die ich in der diesjährigen Review bewundere (und es gibt mehr als die, die ich hier zitiert habe), ist die, vor der ich am liebsten stehen würde, Embroidery of Dew von Laurentiu Anghelache. Die Arbeit ist temporär, solch ein zartes Gespinst kann den Elementen niemals Stand halten. In dieser Verletzlichkeit liegt ein Teil der Wirkung sämtlichen Glases. Indem das zerrissene Korbgeflecht in die Natur gesetzt wird, werden seine Metaphern erhöht und dadurch, daß die Bezüge vielfältig und offensichtlich sind, haben sie für den Betrachter eine unendliche Bedeutung Eine letzte Bemerkung: Wie in jeder New Glass Review gab es Entscheidungen von einem oder mehreren Mitgliedern der Jury, die von einem oder mehreren der anderen entschieden abgelehnt wurden. Solch ein Vorkommen ist eher die Norm als die Ausnahme, ein starkes persönliches Engagement – nicht eine Unterordnung unter den Konsens – ist gefragt. Das ist der Grund, warum die Initialen jedes Jurors unter den Arbeiten stehen, die er oder sie unterstützt hat. Nichtsdestotrotz fühle ich mich in diesem Jahr genötigt bezüglich der Aufnahme von zwei bestimmten Arbeiten kein Blatt vor den Mund zu nehmen: eines ist der offensichtliche „Abkömmling“ der Arbeit eines anderen Künstlers und eine zweite, die in einem Wettbewerb unangebracht ist, der ernsthaft versucht, nicht nur herauszustellen was neu sondern auch was gut ist. Sie können mich für elitär halten (und vielleicht hätten Sie recht), trotzdem glaube ich, daß Arbeiten, die so sehr jeden Ehrgeizes entbehren, nicht unterstützt werden sollten, noch nicht einmal von dem Geschenkemarkt, für den sie gemacht sind.

My general observations from viewing the entries for New Glass Review 18:

I would like to see a more rigorous collaboration among designers, artists, and manufacturers. Schools need to make a strong commitment to craft design and art.

Among the entries, I would like to have seen more use of glass in architecture, interior design, and furniture. Flat glass was seldom used in a three-dimensional manner. Domestic glass and industrial glass were weak – few designs for goblets, cups, or tableware were submitted for consideration. Besides the excellent sculpture of Michael Scheiner, there was very little work larger than tabletop scale.

I noticed only a small amount of neon, beadwork, and pâte de verre.

In general, the work took advantage of too few of the models available from the vast history of glass.

While some people I selected (such as Osamu Noda) have been represented with similar objects in past issues of New Glass Review, I thought the work was of excellent quality and should be included in this issue.

I chose some pieces because of my personal interest in the decorative. I chose others because they illustrated a formal use of glass that I believe should be represented.

The entries that I found interesting were submitted by: Roland "Rick" Ayotte, Horst Bartels, An Cantor, Jennifer Conway, Rex Cravat, Nani Croze, Lark Dalton and Corrie Haight, John Drury, Jan Fišar, Takeshi Fukunishi, Page Hazlegrove, Christopher Hughes, Ada Isensee, Tlws Johnson, Jenny Kipp, Shima Koike, Keiko Kumazawa, Erik Meaker, Nancy Monk, Roger Nachman, Makiko Nakagami, Jo Nuttall, Robert Palusky, Gordon Park, Minna Porkola, Auli Rautiainen, Michael Scheiner, Loren Stump, Layla Walter, Dick Weiss and Walt Lieberman, Harumi Yukutake, and Donna Zalusky.

In the end, I was very happy to be included in the process, and to be exposed to so much creativity.

Meine generellen Beobachtungen beim Betrachten der Einsendungen für die New Glass Review 18:

Ich würde gern eine rigorosere Zusammenarbeit von Designern, Künstlern und Herstellern sehen. Schulen bedürfen einer starken Bindung an das Design von Kunsthantwerk und an Kunst.

Unter den Einsendungen hätte ich gern mehr die Verwendung von Glas in Architektur, bei der Inneneinrichtung und bei Möbeln gesehen. Flachglas wurde selten dreidimensional benutzt. Haushaltsglas und industrielles Glas waren schwach – wenige Entwürfe für Kelche, Tassen oder Geschirr waren vorgelegt worden. Außer der exzellenten Skulptur von Michael Scheiner gab es wenig Arbeiten, die man nicht auf den Tisch hätte stellen können.

Ich habe nur eine kleine Anzahl von Neon, Perlenarbeiten und pâte de verre bemerkt.

Im allgemeinen zogen die Arbeiten Nutzen aus allzu wenigen Modellen, die aus der ungeheuren Geschichte von Glas verfügbar sind.

Obwohl einige Leute, die ich ausgewählt habe (wie Osamu Noda), mit ähnlichen Objekten in vergangenen Ausgaben der New Glass Review vertreten waren, dachte ich, daß die Arbeit von außerordentlicher Qualität ist und in diese Nummer aufgenommen werden sollte.

Ich habe einige Arbeiten auf Grund meines persönlichen Interesses am Dekorativen ausgesucht. Ich habe andere gewählt weil sie den formalen Umgang mit Glas illustrieren, der, so denke ich, repräsentiert sein sollte.

Die Einsendungen, die ich interessant fand, stammten von: Roland „Rick“ Ayotte, Horst Bartels, An Cantor, Jennifer Conway, Rex Cravat, Nani Croze, Lark Dalton und Corrie Haight, John Drury, Jan Fišar, Takeshi Fukunishi, Page Hazlegrove, Christopher Hughes, Ada Isensee, Tlws Johnson, Jenny Kipp, Shima Koike, Keiko Kumazawa, Erik Meaker, Nancy Monk, Roger Nachman, Makiko Nakagami, Jo Nuttall, Robert Palusky, Gordon Park, Minna Porkola, Auli Rautiainen, Michael Scheiner, Loren Stump, Layla Walter, Dick Weiss und Walt Lieberman, Harumi Yukutake und Donna Zalusky.

Letztlich war ich sehr froh, daß ich in dieses Verfahren eingeschlossen und so viel Kreativität ausgesetzt war.

Note

In 1996, more than 6,000 copies of the New Glass Review 18 prospectus were mailed. Each entrant could submit a maximum of three slides. A total of 826 individuals and companies representing 40 countries submitted 2,235 slides. The 100 objects illustrated in this Review were selected by four jurors, whose initials follow the descriptions of the objects they chose.

All slides submitted to New Glass Review are retained in the Rakow Library of The Corning Museum of Glass, where they may be viewed by the public. Copies of slides published in any of the past Reviews may be purchased by special order from the Museum's Sales Department. Copies of New Glass Review 3 (1982), 13 (1992), 15 (1994), 16 (1995), and 17 (1996) are still available from the Sales Department, which can also supply all back issues of the Review in black-and-white microfiche.

The Corning Museum of Glass would like to thank all of the artists and designers who submitted their slides to New Glass Review for consideration. Special thanks are due to those who made this publication possible: Louise Bush, Charlene Holland, Ernestine Kyles, Barbara Miller, Richard Price, Joan Romano, Jacelyn Saunders, and Violet Wilson.

Some of the Best in Recent Glass

This section was initiated in 1996 as an addendum to New Glass Review. It is an attempt to focus on exceptional work that may or may not have been submitted to the annual competition.

As it happens, one of the most interesting large-scale installations of the past year was selected by the jury (unanimously) for inclusion in New Glass Review 18. Michael Scheiner's Natural Progression was commissioned for an office building in Manhattan. The mass of translucent blue-green and brownish tubing is far from a benign piece of office decoration. Like a claw, an arterial system, or a clutch of communication cables similar to those crowding its surroundings, the sculpture extends from a single narrow point, skimming just above the floor. It widens and branches up through a second floor, where the "arms" reach expansively out over the heads of employees hunched over computers. Adding to the confrontational experience are low ceilings, masses of people Dieser Teil wurde 1996 als Zusatz zur New Glass Review eingerichtet. Er ist ein Versuch, das Augenmerk auf außerordentliche Arbeiten zu lenken, die beim jährlichen Wettbewerb teilgenommen haben oder auch nicht.

Wie es so geht, wurde eine der interessantesten, großformatigen Installationen des vergangenen Jahres von der Jury (einstimmig) für die New Glass Review 18 gewählt. Michael Scheiners Natural Progression ist eine Auftragsarbeit für ein Bürogebäude in Manhattan. Die Masse der halb durchsichtigen blau-grünen und bräunlichen Röhren ist weit von einer freundlichen Bürodekoration entfernt. Wie eine Klaue, ein System von Arterien oder ein Gespinst von Kommunikationskabeln, ähnlich denen, die massenhaft in seiner Umgebung verlegt sind, dehnt sich die Skulptur von einem einzigen schmalen Punkt aus, gleitet etwas über den Boden. Sie erweitert und verzweigt sich über ein crowded into work cubicles, and a fairly high volume of noise. The site is a beehive (or perhaps an anthill analogy would be more appropriate), and Scheiner's sculpture is an integral part of the congestion. While Natural Progression would complement, and in some ways benefit from, a more serene setting, its engagement and "dialogue" with the present environment are at a level seldom achieved by public art. The risk-taking patron, who was interested in Scheiner as a sculptor rather than as a glass artist, must be applauded.

Surely Diana Hobson's "Language of Light" show at the Butler Gallery, Kilkenny Castle, Ireland, was one of the year's most beautifully and carefully conceived exhibitions. The work, made between 1994 and 1996, established Hobson's movement away from the precious pâte de verre vessels with which she is identified. Now, solid colorless glass elements are paired with real tree branches or bronze cast from charred zweites Stockwerk, wo die „Arme“ weit über die Köpfe der Angestellten hinausgreifen, die über die Computer gebeugt sind. Diese Erfahrung von Konfrontation wird durch niedrige Decken gesteigert, durch zahllose Menschen, die in Arbeitskuben gepfercht sind und einen ziemlich hohen Geräuschpegel. Der Ort ist ein Bienenstock (oder vielleicht wäre die Analogie mit einem Ameisenhaufen treffender), und Scheiners Skulptur ein wesentlicher Bestandteil des Gedränges. Während Natural Progression eine ruhigere Umgebung ergänzen und in gewisser Weise von ihr profitieren würde, ist ihr Engagement und der „Dialog“ in der jetzigen Umgebung von einem bei öffentlicher Kunst selten erreichten Niveau. Dem risikofreudigen Schirmherren, der an Scheiner als Bildhauer mehr als an dem Glaskünstler interessiert war, muß man Beifall zollen.

Sicherlich war Diana Hobsons Language of Light, die in der Butler Gallery in Kilkenny Castle in Irland gezeigt wurde, eine der schönsten wood and juniper sticks. In the strongest pieces, such as Through Fire (also included in New Glass Review 18), the shapes are basic and undecorated except for some surface abrasion. The new work is an important direction for Hobson; it seems grounded where the earlier pieces were transitory, strong, and sure where the others hesitated.

In 1996, a retrospective at Saint Mary's College of California traced the career of Robert Kehlmann. A key figure in the development of contemporary American "stained" glass, Kehlmann emerged in the early 1970s from the California circle, making autonomous panels that were meant to hang on the wall rather than to act as windows. Like the German artists who reinvented architectural glass after World War II and who were a profound influence on him, Kehlmann has always considered the glass primarily as a canvas and the lead as a drawing line. In the 1980s, he began to block almost all light transmission by backing und sorgfältig vorbereiteten Ausstellungen des Jahres. Die Arbeit, entstanden zwischen 1994 und 1996, ist der Ausgangspunkt für Hobsons Entwicklung weg von den kostbaren pâte de verre Gefäßen mit denen man sie identifiziert. Jetzt sind massive, farblose Glaselemente mit echten Zweigen gepaart oder mit Bronzegüssen von verkohlt Holz und Wacholderreisig. Bei den stärksten Arbeiten wie Through Fire (ebenfalls in die New Glass Review 18 aufgenommen) sind die Formen grundlegend und unverziert, außer manchmal durch den Abrieb an der Oberfläche. Die neue Arbeit ist eine wichtige Richtung für Hobson; sie scheint geerdet während die früheren Stücke vergänglich, stark und sicher wo die anderen zögerlich waren.

1996 skizzierte eine Retrospektive am Saint Mary's College of California die Karriere von Robert Kehlmann. Eine Schlüsselfigur in der Entwicklung der zeitgenössischen Glas „malerei“ in Amerika, trat Kehlmann in den frühen 70er Jahren aus dem kalifornischen Kreis auf und schuf autonome Scheiben, die eher dafür gedacht waren, an die Wand gehängt zu werden denn als Fenster zu fungieren. Ähnlich wie die deutschen Künstler, die das architektonische Glas nach dem Zweiten Weltkrieg wiederbelebt haben und einen großen Einfluss auf ihn hatten, hat Kehlmann das Glas immer zuerst als Leinwand gesehen und das Blei the glass with drawings of charcoal and acrylic, and eventually he abandoned all leading. The mixed-media works were defined by flat areas of sandblasting, the very slight shadows that they cast, and their subtle color changes. In recent years, Kehlmann has returned to more three-dimensional texture by experimenting with glass mosaic laid over the drawings. Piano is one such piece. The broken surface forces the viewer to shift back and forth between looking at the glass and looking through the glass. The tesserae do not butt smoothly against one another; therefore, short linear shadows are added to the mix. In some areas, colored pieces of glass roughly approximate the charcoal shapes that they overlap. Through his abstractions, Kehlmann has spent the past 20-odd years analyzing and coming to terms with private artistic and spiritual issues. In the process, he has also quietly demolished more than a few of the restrictive preconceptions surrounding his media.

The "bead people" have long had their own conferences and publications, yet like the framewokers, they were either excluded entirely from or kept on the fringes of studio glass. Ethnographic and folk artists were also peripheral. In the past five years, more artists making and/or working with pre-manufactured glass beads have come to the attention of the art world. Forces in destigmatizing the bead (at least in the United States) have been the sculptures of Joyce Scott, Sherry Markovitz, and Liza Lou. The New Museum of Art's installation of Lou's full-scale, object-filled kitchen, blanketed with glass beads on every surface, was another high point of the year. Other artists have concentrated on more traditional uses of beadwork for costume and body adornment. Alas Zeichenlinie. In den 80er Jahren begann er die Lichtdurchlässigkeit fast vollständig zu blockieren, indem er Kohle- und Acrylzeichnungen hinter das Glas setzte, zeitweilig verzichtete er auf sämtliches Blei. Die Mixedmediaarbeiten wurden durch flache sandgestrahlte Areale bestimmt, durch die ganz leichten Schatten, die dabei geworfen wurden und ihre subtilen Farbveränderungen. In den letzten Jahren hat sich Kehlmann durch Experimente mit Glasmosaik, das über den Zeichnungen liegt, wieder mehr einer dreidimensionalen Textur zugewandt. Piano ist solch eine Arbeit. Die gebrochene Oberfläche zwingt den Betrachter, sich vor und zurück zu bewegen, während er auf das Glas und durch es hindurch sieht. Die Mosaikflächen stoßen nicht glatt aneinander; dadurch fügen sich kurze lineare Schatten der Komposition hinzu. An manchen Stellen haben die farbigen Glasstücke fast dieselbe Form wie die Kohlezeichnungen über denen sie liegen. Durch seine Abstraktionen hat Kehlmann mehr als die letzten zwanzig Jahre damit verbracht, zu analysieren und zu einer Ausdrucksweise mit persönlich künstlerischer und spiritueller Aussage zu kommen. Innerhalb dieses Prozesses hat er außerdem stillschweigend mehr als nur ein paar der einschränkenden Vorurteile zerstört, die dieses Medium umgeben.

Die „Perlenleute“ hatten lange ihre eigenen Konferenzen und Publikationen, ähnlich wie die Lampenarbeiter, sie waren entweder völlig ausgeschlossen oder blieben am Rand des Studioglasses. Ethnografische- und Volkskünstler blieben ebenfalls an der Peripherie. In den letzten fünf Jahren sind mehr Künstler, die Glasperlen machen oder mit vorgefertigten Arbeiten, in das Rampenlicht der Kunstwelt getreten. Einflüsse, die die Perle destigmatisieren (wenigstens in den Vereinigten Staaten) sind von den Skulpturen von Joyce Scott, Sherry Markovitz und Liza Lou ausgegangen. Die Installation von Lou im New Museum of Art, eine mit Objekten gefüllte Küche in Originalgröße, bei der jede Oberfläche mit Perlen bedeckt war, war ein weiterer Höhepunkt des Jahres. Andere Künstler haben sich auf eine mehr traditionelle Verwendung von Perlenarbeit im Bereich Mode- oder Körperschmuck konzentriert. Auch wenn sie vor einigen Jahren gefertigt wurden, verdienen zwei Kragen von Natascha Wolters, einer Künstlerin, die in Berlin lebt, die Aufmerksamkeit eines breiteren Publikums.

though they were made several years ago, two collars by Natacha Wolters, an artist living in Berlin, deserve to be brought to wider attention.

L'Automne and L'Eté depict asymmetrical seasonal vignettes transferred from the artist's original watercolors and drawings. L'Automne und L'Eté stellen asymmetrische Vignetten der Jahreszeiten dar, die von Aquarellen und Zeichnungen der Künstlerin transferiert wurden. Die illusionistischen Stillleben und Landschaften sind flachen gemusterten Bordüren gegenüber gestellt. Zusätzlich zu dem Einfallsreichtum ihres Designs, das gleichzeitig den Stil historischer Perlenarbeiten und zeitgenössische Grafik aufgreift, sind die Kragen eine Tour de Force an Handwerkskunst. Jeder besteht aus annähernd 38 000 winzigen antiken Glasperlen, die auf einem Seidenfaden verstrickt wurden, und es hat Monate gedauert sie zu vollenden. Eine Technik, die von Wolters entwickelt wurde, lässt die Perlenstickerei auf beiden Seiten sichtbar sein und gestattet es, sich den Konturen des Körpers anzupassen. Indem sie sich an ihre eigenen raffinierten und genauen ästhetischen Standards halten, beleben Wolters und ihre Kollegen ein ignorier tes Material und Kunsthhandwerk.

force of craftsmanship. Each is composed of approximately 38,000 antique glass seed beads knitted on silk thread and took months to complete. A technique developed by Wolters left the beading displayed on both sides and allowed it to be contoured to the body. By applying their own sophisticated and exacting esthetic standards, Wolters and her colleagues are reviving an overlooked material and craft.

It is impossible to comment on recent developments in glass without mentioning the ambitious 1996 "Venezia Aperto Vetro" exhibition. It is no secret that the show was fraught with problems; the most glaring was the lack of a discernible theme or point of view. Inexplicable omissions from the list of invitees and the uneven quality of the "guests of honor" category prevented the show from being even a meaningful international survey based on the common medium of glass. Still, the seeming randomness of choices allowed for the inclusion of some refreshing and unexpected work, and the addition of a special section of student work was particularly inspired. All in all, the exhibition was an effort to be commended, if only for the bravery of the organizers in the face of a fearful and vociferous element of the Muranese glass community – a community very much in need of an infusion from the world of design. The word from Venice is that once the exhibition was seen as a popular draw for visitors from around the world, most local resistance melted away. Exposure to foreign work seldom if ever seen in U.S. galleries was as crucial for the Americans who flocked to the show as for the Muranese.

Of the few artists representing Italy in the "Aperto," one in particular has been a bright spot in Muranese glassmaking in recent years. Yoichi

Es ist unmöglich die jüngsten Entwicklungen im Glas zu kommentieren, ohne die ehrgeizige Ausstellung „Venetia Aperto Vetro“ 1996 zu erwähnen. Es ist kein Geheimnis, daß die Ausstellung mit Problemen beladen war; das krasseste war der Mangel eines wahrnehmbaren Themas oder Standpunktes. Unerklärbare Versäumnisse bei der Liste der Eingeladenen und die ungleichmäßige Qualität in der Kategorie der „Ehrengäste“ bewahrten die Ausstellung sogar davor, ein bedeutender internationaler Überblick zu sein, der auf dem gemeinsamen Medium Glas basiert. Dennoch gestattete das anscheinend willkürliche der Auswahl die Aufnahme einiger erfrischender und unerwarteter Arbeiten, außerdem war eine spezielle Abteilung mit Studentenarbeiten besonders inspiriert. Alles in allem war die Ausstellung eine Anstrengung, die es verdient gelobt zu werden, wenn auch nur wegen der Tapferkeit der Organisatoren angesichts der ängstlichen und lautstarken Elemente der Muranese Glasgemeinschaft – einer Gemeinschaft, die sehr einer Infusion aus der Welt des Design bedarf. Man hört aus Venedig, daß, sobald die Ausstellung als populäres Zugpferd für Besucher aus der ganzen Welt gesehen wurde, der größte lokale Widerstand dahin schmolz. Die Zurschaustellung ausländischer Arbeiten, die in amerikanischen Galerien selten oder nie zu sehen sind, war für die Amerikaner, die zu der Ausstellung strömten, ebenso entscheidend wie für die Muranese.

Von den wenigen Künstlern, die bei „Aperto“ Italien vertraten, warf besonders einer ein helles Licht auf das Muranese Glasschaffen der letzten Jahre. Yoichi Ohira, der aus Japan stammt, begann in den frühen 70er Jahren in Venedig zu studieren und zu arbeiten. Im Lauf der letzten zehn Jahre hat er als ein Designer Berühmtheit erlangt, der Ohira, who is from Japan, began studying and working in Venice during the early 1970s. Over the past decade, he has gained prominence as a designer working very much in the Muranese spirit, but bringing to it the fresh point of view of an outsider. The mosaic glass vessels in his "Pastello" series, like the earlier "Marquiscarpas" of Richard Marquis, build on a tradition, extending back to the Roman period, of opaque, brilliantly colored vessels composed of packed cane and murrine slices. Where the Marquis pieces are outrageous in their shapes and scale, for Ohira, unusual color combinations and patterning are the center of attention. We hope that the "Pastello" objects are just the first taste of what Ohira will create with the technique.

For many years, a secret fear was harbored that Lino Tagliapietra (also included in the "Aperto") was one of those glassblowers extraordinaires who could perfectly realize the concepts of others, but who was at a disadvantage when it came to giving birth to original designs. In the past five years, this perception has changed. Like Ohira, Tagliapietra has emerged as one of the most sensitive interpreters of the essence of Venetian glass. His new pieces shown this past summer at the Marina Barovier Gallery – softly colored vessels with narrow openings and bases, covered with filigree decoration (Tagliapietra's specialty) and finished with carved surfaces – abolished any doubt about his artistic abilities and demonstrated that he is unequivocally deserving of the reverence in which he is held.

sehr im Geist von Murano arbeitet aber ihm die frische Sicht eines Außenseiters hinzufügt. Die Mosaikglasgefäße seiner Pastello Serie stützen sich ähnlich wie die frühen Marquiscarpas von Richard Marquis auf eine bis zu den Römern zurückreichende Tradition von opaken Gefäßen in brillanten Farben, die aus zusammengesetzten Röhren und Murrinestücken komponiert sind. Während die Arbeiten von Marquis durch ihre Gestalt und das Format ausgefallen sind, stehen bei Ohira die ungewöhnlichen Farbkombinationen und Musterungen im Zentrum der Aufmerksamkeit. Wir hoffen, daß die Pastello-Objekte nur ein erster Geschmack dessen sind was Ohira mit dieser Technik kreieren wird.

Jahrelang wurde die geheime Befürchtung gehegt, daß Lino Tagliapietra (ebenfalls bei "Aperto" vertreten) einer der herausragenden Glasbläser ist, die perfekt die Konzepte anderer realisieren können, der aber im Nachteil ist, wenn es darum geht, eigene Entwürfe umzusetzen. In den letzten fünf Jahren hat sich diese Wahrnehmung geändert. Ähnlich wie Ohira hat sich Tagliapietra als einer der sensitivsten Interpreten des Geistes des venezianischen Glases entpuppt. Seine neuen Arbeiten, die im vergangenen Sommer in der Marina Barovier Galerie gezeigt wurden – Gefäße mit engen Öffnungen und Sockeln in sanfter Farbgebung, die von einem filigranen Dekor (Tagliapietras Spezialität) überzogen sind und ihre Vollendung in einer gravierten Oberfläche finden – geben jeden Zweifel an seiner künstlerischen Fähigkeit auf und beweisen, daß er fraglos die Ehrerbietung verdient, die ihm entgegengebracht wird.
